Taking time off to enjoy Jurassic Park, junior Josh Boysen relaxes as he reads. Even though Jurassic Park was watched by billions in theatre seats, many read the book for a more detailed illusion.

Junior Gerald Gutierrez and sophomore Nick Cimmarusti fool around during a varsity football game. The varsity football team is coached by Bill Richardson and consisted of forty-nine players.

During the homecoming assembly, senior N.O.T. club member Jenny Vassiliatos pep up the celebration with "All I wanna do is have some Fun."

After another game of exhausting cheering, junior pommer Niki Pasia gets ready to leave. The Pom-pom football season dance started with a defensive and offensive line facing each other.

Senior Akad Younan decorates her friend's face with the colors of Niles West High School. It is a tradition to paint your face during school celebrations to show school spirit.

Spirit. All anyone hears about is spirit. People say we need all kinds of spirit: school spirit, class spirit, team spirit. What does spirit really mean though?

Some people say spirit means going to games and dances. Others feel spirit means wearing school colors and participating in dress-up days. Whatever your definition of spirit might happen to be, just about everyone agrees that spirit proves to be very important.

Spirit and support are essential for success. Most people feel that our school lacks spirit though. Junior Tom Kasalo, our school's spirit leader, Big Red, agrees with this sentiment. "We totally lack school spirit. Just look at the games. Our sport teams have had bad seasons because of a lack of support."

Yet others feel that spirit does exist here, just not enough. "There are some people who go all out and some who do nothing. And then there are those who only do things to be part of a crowd," states sophomore cheerleader Kerri Lin.

Many organizations exist which attempt to boost school spirit. Cheerleaders and pommers try to get fans pumped up at sporting events; and Student Union organizes pep rallies and created Big Red. Their efforts often come up short, however, because many students do not get involved. True, many people at our school do have spirit and do show it. If the whole school would just follow the leads of these people, get involved, and show some pride in our school. Our school could be a better and, of course, a more spirited school.

Hocus Pocus Alama Bocus

Once upon a time, in a community far, far away, fifty-two intelligent teenagers wanted to go to school after junior high. Their combined determination moved their community, and together they created me, Niles Center High School. I am the beginning of a sixty year long history of Niles Township Community High Schools. When I opened in a rented room in Lincoln Elementary School with only six faculty members, I pushed students to work hard and to set a good example. They all grumbled and swore at first, but they did it. I was sad to send them off to neighboring high schools to finish their last two years.

By referendum of the people, I was changed to Niles Township Community High School District 219. My first class of students turned out to be so successful that construction for my child, Niles East, began at once. The four hundred and fifty-seven students were cramped in my quarters were happy to be moved to my new child, a new 1200-student school on Lincoln Avenue.

Niles East was a responsible child. She handled the slowly expanding enrollment easily and expanded herself to two thousand students when it was needed. However, there was a sudden boom in students and she could not handle it anymore. The voters approved the construction of my favorite child, Niles West High School.

As my children traded five thousand students in between themselves, additional classrooms, laboratories, gymnasiums, and expanded cafeterias were added to both schools. To keep up with the steadily mounting enrollment, citizens were once again asked to vote upon a proposition to build my third child, Niles North, and a theatre auditorium, a library, and a music wing for East, my eldest.

My family rose from fifty-two students to rank among the largest secondary school systems in Illinois. The money problems have been a strain to the community. However, the citizens and students have never failed to come up with new propositions and new additions.

Together, my three children served the community for sixteen years. As new students from the fifties and sixties matured and grew up, the enrollment showed that three high schools would not be needed. Niles East closed, and the remaining students transferred to either Niles West or Niles North.

As of right now, a peaceful rivalry exists between my two children. However, they will both place the educational needs of Niles Township students first. I will always be there, in spirit, to back them up when they need it; and we will all live happily ever after.

Junior trombone player Danny Yoon and baritone player Alex Padiernos supports the band in the stands as they cheer on the football team with "Go Big Red." The Marching Band attends every home varsity football game and marches during half-time with a wonderful visual and musical performance.

Science teacher Sarell Hesser glances up with a surprised expression as the camera goes "click". Faculty members take turns to monitor the halls during closed hours to protect students from danger.

Junior Lisa Neville and senior Jamenda Moss, representing the varsity girls' volleyball team, dress up as Donald and Daisy Duck in the homecoming parade. "The Magic of Disney" was the theme for the 1994 homecoming.

Rising for the National Anthem, varsity football players raise up their helmets to show respect for our nation. The "Star Spangled Banner" is usually sung by a soloist from the choral department accompanied by the Marching Band.

Happy with their creation, the Hellenic Club marched down Oakton Street with spirit shining through their float pride. Hellenic Club received third place for the homecoming float competition.

To my cousin, Neil Karshna-
I leave my tremendous amount of detention hours to you. Serve them well. It wasn't easy acquiring them.

-Love, Corrie Sammon

To all my underclassmen buddies at Niles West-

If you're ever tired or bored, go for a ride on the elevators. But if the doors ever open to the face of a teacher, casually walk out with a limp, and they'll leave you alone!

-William Ko

To Valerie and Anna-

I leave my patience and love for the Niles West Theatre Department and men. Just remember how much fun it is when the house lights go out.

-Aris

To the Four Seasons-

I leave to Gold many time spent "confused"; to Chestnut, leave my small bras; and to Autumn my "respect". I love you guys.

-Love, Ivory

To the dynamic duo-I leave prayers for spiritual maturity. To A.C.-I leave you some Z's. To B.Y.C.-I leave you my C.M. from bio. To J.L.-I leave you a megaphone. To J.S.-I leave you car-plugs. A.K.-Where's my candyland? R.D.-Thanks for all the rides! To K.M.-I leave you some sweet spots. To my sisters D.K., C.K., E.A., L.L., and M.K.-Thanks for being so sweet. D.K.-Don't worry about elmo. To E.S. and L.K.-I leave you guys two tickets to U.S. To A.S.-I leave you my exemplary advice on men. To all my L.H. buddies-H hope you feel and understand the love of Jesus Christ soon! To all my brothers and sisters-Romans 12:1-2. Jesus loves you all! God bless!

-Jennifer "Mommy" Jungivitus

P.S. Thanks! to all the teachers who made not only a short term, but a long term difference in my life. M.P. Carr, thanks for all your years of support.

To my two little basketball buddies, Susie Olson and Amy Ginsburg-

I leave you two my basketball, so even when I'm not here next year, you can still play with a part of me.

-Love, Christina Gabler

To my little brother, Seanie-

I leave you the car, so you never have to ask any of my friends to give you a ride home.

-Love always, Stacy

To Tanveer, my "bodacious" bud- I leave you my boldness, which you say you lack, and my I.D. card for all the times you forget to pick up your textbooks. To Michelle and Shana- I leave you my fond memories of the Saturday nights we spent in countless restaurants, and eventually watching movies with the number three in them. To Elias- I leave you my sharp, rapier wit. Perhaps one day, you may use the right instead of left side of your brain and be able to challenge me verbally.

-Hena Shamim

I want to leave my sister, Debbie, a Bible, because this school needs all the help it can get.

As I leave Niles West, I leave ...

1) The damage I've done to car #5 for the next lucky user. 2) The drool I left on locker #135 during the 1992-1993 school year. 3) My name on the floor next to Danny's because the backstage wall was too full. 4) Stamps (for someone to mail all the mail in my locker). 5) The dust that accumulated on my seat in detention because I never got a chance to sit on it.

-"D"

To Chipper-

I leave you my smelly ankle brace, so when you break your ankle, you can wear it too.

Love, Llinkey

To all my younger friends: freshmen, sophomores, and juniors (TUCKER!)-

I really don't leave you anything, but I am very willing to sell you my past exams and notes to my "most challenging courses".

-Richard Park

To Rosiechecks-

I leave the memories at the pools: waterpipes, sandpaper boards, parking tickets, three meter ladders, buses, roasted marshmallows (I think I've got a double call), tweety, our radio with the super-savage-African-jungle-mumbo-jumbo-rock music, jolly ranchers, shotgun (bang), ear infections, the chevette, 6 AM practices, the blonde jokes, diving duo, and the best coach (L.H.T., take care of him, OK!) Thanx for everything.

-Love, Janice "Lil one"

P.S. M.N., L.H., R.K., B.Z., Breakfast Club 4-ever and K.P., yes Michigan.

To my cousin, Diane Pathieu-

I leave my ability to make everyone think I'm innocent, my ability to get whatever I want, whenever I want, and of course, my sensuous, exotic, and sexy bod!

-Love your cuz, Ann Khoury

To Jenny-

I give you my everlasting stash of jolly ranchers so you never have to run around begging for any.

-Love, Pinky

I, Mahesh Madhav, do hereby will and bequeath the following- To Jung-Sup- You can have my computer if you figure out how to turn in on! To Sung- $30 worth of gas for taking me home when I didn't have a car. Not! To Amar- An appointment at Bill and Renee's. No, make that two appointments. To Jenny Jung- All my pens and pencils. Yes, even the blue ones. To Davis, Chirag, Joe, Dave, and Sung- My Metallica and Aerosmith albums. Someday you guys will learn to appreciate real music. To Theresa- More NutriGrain Bars, all my dooleyboppers and soft chocolate chip cookies. And that taffy apple you gave me on Halloween. That is sitting, still is sitting, STILL is sitting upon the pallid dusty top shelf behind my locker door. That my friends, and nothing more.

To Hena- I leave you a lifetime supply of gum, all my math notes and tests, a book of adjectives for when all you can think of is "Have a fruit-loopy Friday!", and a million thank you's for the countless number of times you were there for me. To Adrienne- I leave you anything I own that has to do with the Board of Trade and all the mutual birthday cards ever made. To Michelle- I leave you my phone number (Hint! Hint!), a petri dish, and happiness in whatever you do always. To Karen- I leave you a million bags of Skittles, our expeditions around the school during Mods. 26-28, and all the M&M's you can eat. (Figure it out.)

-Tanveer Najiullah

To my fellow clarinets-
I leave them my "Big Bear" card and a copy of the Bears Super Bowl Shuffle.

-Sang Kim

To Michelle-

I leave My-Lanta and the 150 mile radio.

-Elias Peroulas

To underclassmen-

your face becomes really dry, you can wear it.

-Love, Marge

To Coach Foerch and the Boys Gymnastics Team-

I leave you all of the skin that has been flayed off my body in the past four years. Why am I leaving this? I don't know, it just seemed like the right thing to do.

-Keith Mukai

To my sister-

I leave my cleats so you can follow my footsteps as an all conference defensive tackle someday.

-Love always, Matt Sheahan

To my brother, Jason-

I'm leaving you my alarm clock so you can wake up thirty minutes earlier to take the bus because I won't be here to drive you.

-Love, Erin

To Elias- I leave you unfinished movies, look 2D, Evanston Beach, Kimberly Katherine, and a lifetime of happiness. To Hena- I leave you hand washed, holeless socks. To Shana- I leave you that special column in Seventeen. To all you jerky boys (you know who you are)- I leave you a long overdue APOLOGY for my unacceptable behavior every 28 days or so and a lifetime supply of peppermints. To Theresa- I leave you our neverending phone calls and Chuck E Cheese himself. To Tanveer- I leave you a box of Kleenex (dang those jerky people) and that smile that never fails.

-Michelle Martin

To Mr. Henrici-

I leave a new stack of one thousand detention forms. (He should run out of those in a couple weeks!)

-Later, Ron Friedman

Epilogue

Senior Wills

Janice-

I leave you fond memories of Michigan (wild pigs, a bug in the van, my mom's protection from tornadoes, etc.). I also leave you eight years of friendship that has overcome stressful periods and will hopefully last forever. U R my B.F.!

-K.C.P.

I leave a pocket dictionary of every language to understand conversations in the hallways.

-Jeremy Niedermaier '95

To my sister, Alice-

I leave you with this piece of important advice: Make sure you get off campus stamped because the food in the cafeteria @#)(*^44$$#!

-Love, Rob

Ro and Lisa-

I leave each one of you one of my volleyball shoes. Carry it with you to remind you that I'm always here for you. Thanks for everything.

-Love, Cathleen

To my sister, Pat-

I leave you my lotion so when

Seniors Don Sukantawanich and Seong Park pose for the photographer. Sukantawanich has been on the volleyball team during all four of his high school years.

Taking a break from the dance floor, students rest and chat with one another. The Homecoming theme was "The Magic of Disney".

Mother Kanga, senior Tracy Frey, feeds sophomore Joseph Chollampel, Winnie the Pooh, vitamins. Mother Kanga loves to make sure that everyone's fit and healthy.

Up, down, turn around. Opposite of the rumor that dancers only kick and look pretty, Orchestis members rehearse more than once a week to produce a dramatic show. Technicolor Dance, the 1995 Orchestis dance show, was based on the popular musical, Joseph and the Technicolor Dream Coat.

Graduate Holly Branick proudly receives her diploma from Board of Education members. In addition to their regular diplomas, each graduate also got a pocket-sized one.

Senior Amanda Cash gives a welcoming speech during the graduation ceremony. Many students gave speeches during graduation to thank everyone who helped them reach their special day.

Junior Jenny DeGuzman gives a big smile during graduation. DeGuzman and many other students performed as marshals, walking the graduates to the stage.

At 7:00 on June 2nd, 1994, the first few notes of "Pomp and Circumstance" could be heard in the Welsh Ryan Arena at Northwestern University as the graduating class of 1994 walked down the aisle to their seats. Choral director Shari Owens sang "The Star Spangled Banner" and Expressions sang "It's So Hard to Say Goodbye" with meaning. Valedictorian Wei "Felix" Yu and Salutatorian Helmut Kopke gave speeches on what they have learned through the years and class president Scott Gartner gave a speech on what high school has meant to him. This graduation was also made more special because it was Dr. Rutheford's last year as principal.

Valedictorian Wei "Felix" Yu and salutatorian Helmut Kopke lead the graduation class of 1994 with happy expressions on their faces. The entire ceremony took less than two hours.

In their elegant white caps and gowns, the female graduates sang the graduation song, "It's so Hard to say Goodbye to Yesterday," with Expression underclassmen.

This ceremony did not only mean the end of high school for the class of '94, but it also meant the beginning of a new way of life. Right now, the future is different for everyone. Some will get jobs or go into the armed forces, while others will continue their schooling at different colleges and universities. Even though they may be separated by miles, one thing is for certain, they will forever have the memories that they shared through the years.

Maria Trograncic

Senior Kristin Ichishita happily awaits the calling of her name at the 1994 graduation ceremony. Roughly three hundred and eighty students graduated.

Class president Scott Gartner addresses the audience as he says his farewell to his fellow classmates. All four senior cabinet officers took part in the ceremony.

Graduate Janet Acosta smiles after she received her diploma. Acosta was a National Honor Society member involved in softball and swimming.

Senior Kristina Braovac receives her diploma on June 2, 1994. Niles North's graduation took place the day before at Welsh-Ryan Arena.

In their elegant red caps and gowns, the senior male graduates sang the graduation song, "It's so Hard to say Goodbye to Yesterday," with Expression underclassmen.

Parents were seen throughout the night, browsing at the raffle table set out by the Music Parent/Teacher Association. Pasta and Pops took place in the gym.

Freshman Jenny Gravier expresses herself through her cello during the orchestra performance at Pasta and Pops. Like many students, Gravier is involved in many fine arts organizations such as Fame and of course, orchestra.

Featuring the trombone section, players Mike Angarola, Mark Passignajen, and Danny Yoon, and others jazzed up the gym with "Trombones On the Run". Symphonic and Concert Band joined together for a spectacular performance.

Instead of the formal concert attitude, the gym was lightened up by songs such as "Shoop, Shoop" (soloist pictured - junior, Valerie Parreno). Because of the arrival of Sheri Owen's new baby boy, the four choirs were directed by voice teacher Candy Crane.

The annual Pasta and Pops fundraiser for the music department brought a large number of guests to the gymnasium. The evening entertainment provided a variety of food and delightful musical talents.

Tonight Is Pasta Night!!!

Niles West

"Pasta and Pops is, by far, my most enjoyable concert of the season," declared band director, William Koch. The special night consisted of delicious food, gorgeous music, colorful decorations, and thorough organization by the Music Parent/Teacher Association.

Different types of music filled the crowded gymnasium while parents, staff members, and students munched on snacks from the huge dessert table supplied by the performers. Orchestra director, Steven Katz, boosted, "I thought that the orchestra's performance was outstanding at Pasta and Pops. The support from the community for this event is excellent."

Everything good in life is laced with something bad. "The sound system was terrible. You could hear the guy calling off the raffle numbers better than the choruses singing. Other than that, it was a successful event," stated Chamber Choir member, Jenni Wielgus. (Raffle tickets were sold during the event, and the winning numbers were called off throughout the night.)

Congratulations to the chorus director, Candy Crane, orchestra director, Steven Katz, band director, William Koch, and all the participants on a job well done. You were wonderful!

Pin Lin

Choral Union is one of the four choruses that performed. Pasta and Pops is playfully known as the "Spaghetti Serenade".

Jamming on her xylophone is senior Gemma Gonzales. Sections of the band, such as the percussion and the trombones, were featured during the band's performance at Pasta and Pops.

With beauty and finesse, senior Gray Strykowski "performed" during the annual Orchesis Dance. With the job of being the comic relief, Strykowski and other "gentlemen" put on a show that Tchaikovsky would have been proud of.

Seniors Brian Zaker and Maria Stratigakes danced to "Nevertheless". The dances looked spectacular with spotlighting by members of the crew.

With the help of the night backdrop and twelve crew members that worked sometimes until seven or eight in the evening, "Gotta Dance", the theme of the 1994 Orchesis performance, was a success. Shown here, Senior Brian Zaker dips the princess (Alisa Sajadi) in Sleeping Beauty.

Choreographed by members of Orchesis, Orchette dancers energetically perform "Jelly's Last Jam". Some of the colorful outfits wore were provided by Terri Ripley.

Equipped with balloon breasts and ballerina tutus, the "Men's Return" skillfully entertain the audience. Volunteers from the school supply the group with their own ideas and originality.

Loud clapping and smiling faces concluded "Friends like Me", a dance performed at Orchesis '94. Orchesis is a student dance company that performs a different variety of dances.

Showtime!!!

The theme for the 1994 Orchesis Dance Company's show was "Gotta Dance." The opening dance number ("Gotta Dance") consisted of a showtune that turned into techno. There were about 50 dancers that performed throughout the show.

The dances differed from duets to "Rodeo", a country western dance that used the music from the famous beef commercials. On the more classical side, the ballet "Sleeping Beauty" enchanted the audience. With not quite the same elegance, the male dancers performed a more amusing "Sleeping Beauty."

Also in the show were many oldies. Dancers had a 50's flashback, dancing to the music from the musical "Grease." "Jelly's Last Jam" was another flashback from the 1920's. To accompany the music, the dancers also wore costumes that took us back in time.

Along with the oldies, there were newer songs too. Dancers danced to Janet Jackson's "If", and her brother Michael's "In the Closet". "In the Closet" was actually performed by the Auroris Dance Company, which is Niles North's equivalent to our Orchesis.

Not only did the choreography have to go with the music, so did the lighting. Crew members spent countless hours going over the music with the dancers for the lighting effects. So the final product was a perfect mix of dancing, music, and lighting.

Mr. Krogstad (sophomore Jesse Winograd) carefully explains to Nora his personal course of basic business instruction and accuses her of forging a loan contract. Calmly, he taunts her with the information, knowing that he has complete power over her family, reputation, and life.

“Darling Little Songbird”

A Doll's House was set in Norway in the 1880's. It is a story about deception, love, and conspiracy. The tension between the characters grows throughout the play, ending in an explosive climax.

Nora (Karina Kramer-Schevers), at first seems like the typical house wife, but really is the exact opposite. She is secretly paying off Krogstad (Jesse Winograd). He is keeping the secret that she forged checks to get money to save her husband's life.

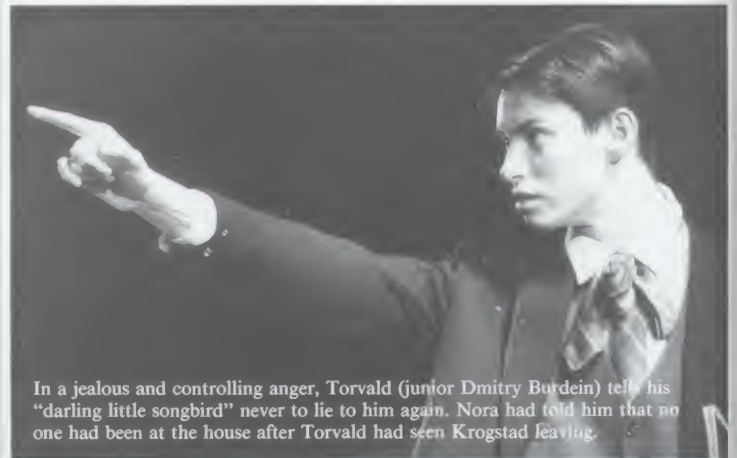

All the while, Torvald (Dmitry Burdein) is getting ready for a new lifestyle. He has just become manager of the bank he works in and will receive a big pay raise. Dr. Rank (Jason Whittinghill), Torvald's best friend, has fallen in love with Nora, and is dying from a fatal disease.

Krogstad then decides to use his knowledge to force Nora into coaxing Torvald into giving him a job at the bank. To make matters worse, Krogstad's former lover (and Nora's former best friend)

Kristeen (Sara VanSickle) comes back into the picture. Eventually Nora realizes that her entire life has been a lie, so she walks out on everyone, even her children. The play ends with everyone staring in disbelief at the door that Nora just closed in search of “the most wonderful thing of all.”

The set and costumes for the show were nothing short of a Broadway production. The crew and costumer really transformed the auditorium into the little Norwegian town in which Nora and Torvald live.

Eric Nees

In a jealous and controlling anger, Torvald (junior Dmitry Burdein) tells his “darling little songbird” never to lie to him again. Nora had told him that no one had been at the house after Torvald had seen Krogstad leaving.

Nora (junior Karina Kramer-Schevers) and Torvald (junior Dmitry Burdein) playfully discuss past Christmases, money, and their future lifestyle. The set for “A Doll's House” was finally finished after two weeks of wallpapering and carpeting.

With bubbling smiles and confident words, Nora assures the children (Amelia Estrich and Christopher Batts) that all is well in the household. She tells them to go play with their nurse, Anne Marie (freshman Melissa Venn), who fails to sense how distraught Nora is under the happy act.

After eight years of separation, Kristine Linde (senior Sarah VanSickle) comes to visit her old friend, Nora. After caring for her ill mother and young brothers and enduring an unsuccessful marriage, Kristine was forced to work vigorously merely to survive. Now she sits with Nora, vibrant and prosperous, in hopes of finding a job.

In desperation and despair, Nora (junior Karina Kramer-Schevers) worries about her ability to be a good mother and wife after Torvald expresses that he thinks forgery is an act done by someone morally crippled. After forging a loan contract to save her husband's life, Mr. Krogstad begins to blackmail her.

Senior James Lamadrid and junior Jamenda Moss smile happily at the camera as they proudly wear the crowns as the 1994 prom king and queen. May 27, 1994, the night of the prom, will probably be a night that these two will never forget.

Seniors Brian Zaker and Megan Malartsik embrace at the last dance of their high school career. The theme of the 1994 prom was "Save the Best for Last"

Relaxing with a nice old time boogie, a group of seniors make prom night a night to remember. Prom '94 was held at the Marriot Hotel in downtown, Chicago.

Special Moments

On the night of May 27, many couples attended Prom 1994 which was held at the Marriot Hotel in downtown, Chicago. Anxious to get the celebration started, friends greeted each other in the lobby of the fifth floor ballroom.

A variety of dress styles created a scene making it look like an elegant fashion show. From sequin dresses to Mickey Mouse cumberbunds, everyone had his or her own special taste. Along with the unique fashions, the ballroom looked spectacular as well. Decorated in black, gold, and bone, the ballroom was filled with balloons, tables and a dance floor.

Dinner consisted of a mixed fruit cup, tossed Caesar salad, breast of chicken Venetian, seasonal vegetables, and pasta. For dessert, couples could enjoy creating their own sundae at the "make your own sundae station". Complete with the tunes of the Don Cagen band, the night was perfect.

After dinner, some couples danced while others sat back and conversed with friends. Others returned to the lobby to have complementary pictures taken by the professional photographer. In addition, the lobby was a place for friends to take informal pictures of each other.

As the dance slowly began to end, the names of Prom King and Queen were to be announced. Couples were allowed to vote once and cast their vote in the lobby. With enthusiasm the crowd anticipated the announcement of the names. The winning couple was James Lamadrid and Jamenda Moss. "I was so happy. I felt like Miss America!" commented Moss. Afterwards, the royal couple took their traditional slow dance followed by other couples.

When the dance came to an end, the night did not. Some couples attended the comedy performance of Second City, sponsored by the PTSA, while others went on carriage rides, hotel parties, or other special plans of their own. When the night finally came to a close, those who attended could cherish the wonderful memories it brought about. Prom will always be one of the most special moments in a high school student's life.

Jill Pasia

Jamming to the tunes of the Frosh/Soph Mixer, sophomores Frances Fontanez, Dorianne Williams, and freshman Tina Theisen enjoy the dance that was held specifically for their classes. Every year the dance is sponsored by the Sophomore class cabinet.

On September 17, nearly two hundred freshmen and sophomores flooded the Niles West cafeteria for the annual Frosh-Soph Mixer. With music blaring, the mixer gave freshmen a chance to meet many new people and sophomores a chance to hang out and enjoy themselves. It also allowed all the underclassmen to relax after the first few weeks of school.

Most people enjoyed themselves. "It was a great way to meet people and have fun," said freshman Charmaine Manasala. Others, however, thought it could have been better. Sophomore Tammy Hrajnoha criticized, "It was alright. Not terrific, but alright. The drinks they had, some kind of watery Kool-Aid, were terrible. Other than that, though, it was pretty nice."

While people expressed mixed reactions, almost everyone enjoyed themselves. "It was good. The music could have been better, though. They needed more variety. Still, it was good," replied freshman Beverly Aprieto. Sophomore cabinet, who sponsor the event, decorated the cafeteria with many different colored streamers. Sophomore Jenny Landis summoned up her impression of the mixer by saying, "It was okay. I think it's better when you're a freshman and don't know anyone. It's more fun and you're more open." Many students continued having fun by going out with their friends afterward.

Sophomore Tiffany Buckner parties at the Frosh-Soph Mixer. Buckner and nearly 200 other underclassmen enjoyed a night of fun at the Mixer.

Freshman Sofia Souflaki shows her friends the latest dance step at the Frosh/Soph Mixer. The mixer was a great place to have fun and meet new people.

Students converse and joke around with Dean Erikson. Two new deans were introduced to the Niles West staff, Dean Yacker and Dean Wayne.

Freshmen and Sophomores live it up at the Frosh-Soph mixer. The Frosh-Soph mixer is an annual event held for underclassmen to meet new people.

Senior Kristin Langwell consults a representative from Kenyon College (who, by the way, looks suspiciously like social studies teacher, Christopher Schwarz) to help make her decision in which college to attend. Although many students prepare to move out of state to attend school, some prefer to stay home.

Filling out a catalog request form, sophomore Anna Marchisotta hesitates to remember something. Students from all grade levels can be seen throughout the halls during College Night. It is never too late to start thinking about your future.

Gateway To The Future

College Night took place on Monday night, September 19th. This stimulating event broadened our narrow horizons and introduced us to many options available after high school. Representatives from over three hundred colleges and universities crowded the hallways, the gym, and the cafeteria at West. Students of all classes and levels came to collect pamphlets, pictures, and other literature that summarizes and commemorates the different schools. Presently, most of this material sits on a desk lined with dust, awaiting the trip to the garbage can. Even so, College Night forces us to face the future and hopefully not run from it.

High school ends in four years and although the future seems to await us with open jaws, we will at least have some information before either falling prey to our worries or rising successfully to overcome our obstacles. Some students prefer to jump right into a hopeful outlook of the future. Others would gladly admit they dread the thought of going to college, and then upon graduating, motivating themselves to find a job. Whatever the case may be, it is important to understand that there are many different options to accommodate the choices you make for your future.

With all this talk of the future, College Night was a waking reality check for most of us. Although many went with the thought of the word "future", many left with an overwhelming realization of now.

Nicole Bandur

Parents can be seen filling out forms at College Night. They bring home piles of forms for their children, only to find that their children were as busy as they were.

Preparations for College Night started hours before the actual event. Faculty members and coaches all took the night off to participate in this community-wide event.

College Night took place not only in the hallways but also in the gym and the auditorium. Students from other schools, people interested in returning to school, and of course, Niles West students flooded the different college representatives with questions and statements.

Shaking hands with Principal Roger Stein, Seth Bender receives recognition for his scholarship and leadership. There were sixty-seven seniors inducted into the National Honor Society.

New member John Hedrick proceeds to his seat during the National Honor Society induction ceremony. The ceremony was held on October fifth in the auditorium.

The Four Doves

The National Honor Society's new members were rewarded for their service, character, scholarship, and leadership Wednesday, October 5th, in an induction ceremony. The Niles West orchestra provided the mood as the selected seniors proceeded into the auditorium as proud parents, friends, and teachers looked on. NHS officer Theresa Allocco then led everyone in the Pledge of Allegiance. Sara Williams, another officer, followed with a short explanation of what the National Honor Society is.

Principal Dr. Roger Stein and physics teacher Martha Lietz gave short, inspirational speeches before the inductees were announced. Each new member had his or her name announced by officer Jeremy McCormick with two or three school-related activities that they excelled in over the past four years. They also received certificates to commemorate this achievement. Next, NHS officer Davis Kim led all the members in the National Honor Society Pledge. Soon after, the musical group Expressions provided a last bit of entertainment as they sang the song "Dreams". The night was capped off with a reception held in the cafeteria. The students and parents were treated with ice cream, cookies, and punch as well as music from the orchestra. Davis Kim summed up the whole night when he said, "All of the committees worked very hard to make sure each part of the ceremony ran smoothly. The ice cream was a nice touch, also."

DRACULA

Dracula: King Of The Vampires

Dracula, the 1994 fall play, was appropriately performed a couple weeks before Halloween. James Batts, the director, had the perfect last name and ideas of how to run the show. Hours of research were put into making the play as realistic as possible.

Dr. VanHelsing (Matt Joseph) is called by Dr. Seward (Luke Henry) to help with his daughter's strange illness. Lucy (Karina Kramer-Schevers) has fallen ill and is complaining of strange nightmares. All the while, Jonathan Harker (Mike Glick) is frightened because his fiancée is suffering from the same symptoms as Mina, who died a week earlier.

Butterworth (Seth Bender) and Miss Wells (Jennifer Bergstrom) add comical relief to the very serious drama. Renfield (Jesse Winograd), the mental patient and Dracula's side kick, also adds to the humorous side.

Eventually Harker, Seward and VanHelsing figure out that Count Dracula (Dmitry Burdein), their new neighbor, is connected with Lucy's illness. So they hunt him down and destroy him with a stake through the heart.

The play called for dramatic and breath taking special effects, and the stage crew comes through in a big way. Bats flying over the audience's heads and the fog cloaking the stage are just a few of these spectacular effects. Dracula was a rousing success and perfect way to start off the theatre's year.

Eric Nees

Ending the play with a soliloquy, Count Dracula (senior Dmitry Burdein) bewares the audience about the possibility of superstition. The Dracula cast consisted of eight of the best actors and actresses of Niles West.

As senior Luke Henry paces the room, junior Matt Joseph tries to convince senior Karina Kramer-Schevers that everything is alright. The suspenseful feeling of Dracula was made possible by special effects such as bats hanging from the auditorium ceiling, fogs, and lighting.

Dressed from head to toes in virgin white, Lucy Seward tries to recollect her "nightmare" as the renowned metaphysician, Dr. Abraham VanHelsing analyzes her for her unexplained illness. Dracula was directed by James Batts.

Busy at his desk, senior Mike Glick appears throughout the play as Lucy Seward's loving fiancé. Glick, in a sense, was Lucy's moral support to fight Count Dracula.

Appearing through a mist of fog, Count Dracula hypnotizes Miss Wells into his power. Wells, against her will, acted as a spy for the Count in Dr. Seward's household.

9:30 To 9:30

Many students woke up the morning of Friday, October 21, with a smile on their faces. Why? Today was homecoming.

The school day started late and ended early. What could be better? A fun-filled pep assembly kicked off the days events. Pommers and cheerleaders, with their peppy dances, stirred up the crowd, while the band provided the music. The assembly, organized by Student Union, featured the fall sports captains, Big Red, and the introduction of the Homecoming court. The day progressed with shortened classes. The 1:15 dismissal was the perfect end to the perfect school day.

Though classes were over, the fun was not. The Homecoming parade began at 1:30 with fire trucks and police cars clearing the road for the band, which led the parade. The various organizations followed the musicians. Senior Cabinet, the Cheerleaders, and Hellenic Club were voted the best floats by the parade judges.

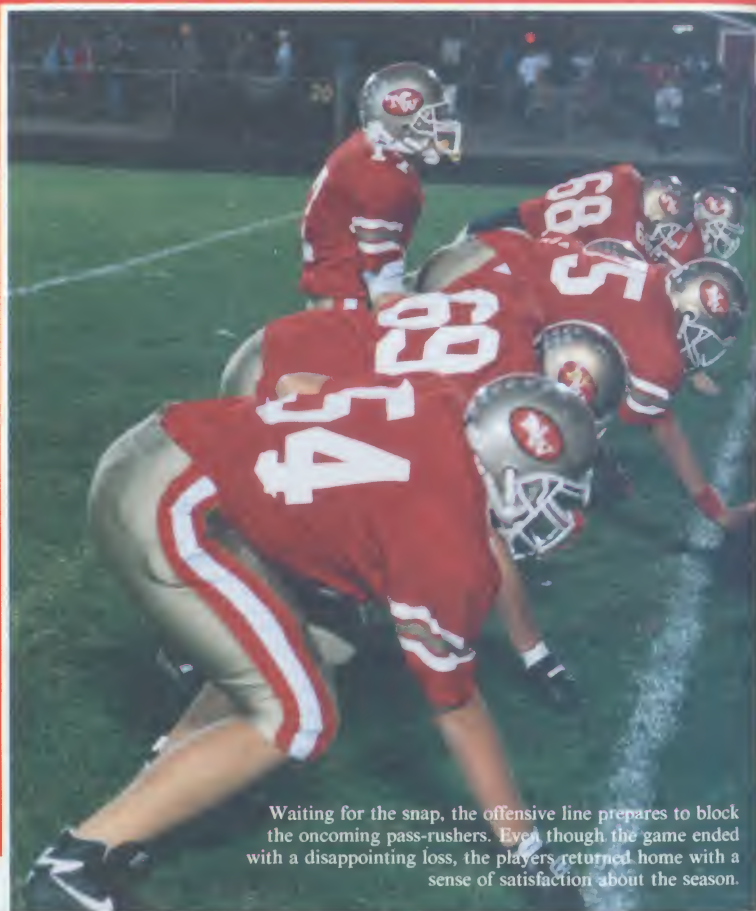

The day concluded with the annual Indian football games. Junior Varsity began at 5:00 with the Varsity following at 7:30.

Heidi Eichler &
Kelly McBreen

Junior Tom "Watermelon" Kasalo stands attentively during the Homecoming game. Kasalo was voted Big Red through a school-wide election and made his first appearance at the assembly.

Riding slowly down Oakton Street, Freshman Cabinet participates in the Homecoming parade. Step-off time for the parade was 1:30PM.

Waiting for the snap, the offensive line prepares to block the oncoming pass-rushers. Even though the game ended with a disappointing loss, the players returned home with a sense of satisfaction about the season.

Ronnie Friedman powerfully bursts through the homecoming banner prepared by the varsity cheerleaders. Friedman was one of four team captains this year.

Sitting together as the royal couple, Homecoming King, Tony Pontikis, and his Queen, Tracy Sloan, ride atop a convertible in the parade. The elections were open to the entire school.

The Niles West Marching Band along with the Flag Corp marches down Oakton with a steady beat. The musical selections paid tribute to the rock band Styx, and featured the songs "Rocking the Paradise, A.D. 1928", "Lady", "Come Sail Away", "Music Time", and "Centerfold".

Senior Jeremy Niedermaier trots through the lines of cheerleaders and pom-poms as cheers rose for the rest of the football team. The assembly started at 9:30 a.m.

Accompanied by the marching band, junior Pin Lin sings a beautiful rendition of the National Anthem. Even though she knew that the crowd could hardly hear her, butterflies formed in her stomach as her knees turned into rubber.

The squad gets into position for their half-time performance. Cheerleaders keep the crowd going to support their team.

Sophomore Cabinet stands up and waves at the spectators. Clubs and organizations decorate cars, trucks, tractors, and other vehicles for a chance to win the float contest.

Senior Lori Mammoser and date enjoy themselves on the dance floor. After the dance is over, most students continue their night of fun by going out with their friends.

Anxious to enter the dance, many couples stand in line, conversing with each other. The Homecoming dance is made possible by our Student Union.

While on their way to the Homecoming dance, sophomore Mike Georgescu and date, Susie Patel, give a smile for the camera. The theme for this year's Homecoming was "The Magic of Disney".

Seniors Matt Luby and Michelle Marino gaze into each other's eyes as the music plays. The Homecoming dance was held on October 22.

Students who attend the dance must have their bid receipts in order to get in. The dance lasted from 7:30 until 10:30.

A dance-goer pauses to fix her lipstick before entering "The Magic Kingdom". Many students go to great lengths to make sure the night of Homecoming is perfect.

The Magic of DISNEY

The "magic" of Homecoming is definitely fading. Five hours of preparation hardly seem worth it when you are only going to spend twenty minutes at a dance. Why spend the time and money on the tortures of getting your hair done, getting a manicure and facial, and shopping for a dress, shoes, accessories, nylons, and makeup when you are just going to stop at the dance to get your picture taken and then leave? Two Homecoming attendees, senior Jenny Deczekalski and junior Neil Karshna, responded similarly when asked their opinions of the Homecoming dance. Deczekalski related, "I don't know (how the dance was), I wasn't there very long. I was only there for an hour and a half."

Karshna responded, "The dance? I was only there for half an hour. I got pictures taken, danced to two songs, then left."

Senior Kelly Irwin provided great insight to the purpose of the preparation rituals when she said, "The dance was O.K., but Homecoming is really about the night after the dance."

Karen Malina

The National Honor Society and United Blood Services held the annual fall blood drive on November 28th. Seniors, juniors and faculty gave up their time to participate in the blood drive, making it a worthwhile venture. Although many more students would like to donate blood, there are some requirements. For example, donors must weigh over 110 pounds and be sixteen years and older.

Though a few problems occurred throughout the day, the process of giving blood is relatively painless. Just a pinch of a needle in your arm, and you help save four lives with one pint of blood. However, it did help many students that movies were played on the VCR on a consistent basis, because it distracted them. "I was a little bit scared before giving blood, but watching that handsome Aladdin made me forget all my worries.", said senior Annie Kim.

Other donors put their fears at the back of their minds, reminding themselves that they were helping others. Senior Mike Tsipursky said, "I always wanted to contribute to a good cause and giving blood was a great opportunity. It was a rather painful, but fulfilling experience which I will probably never forget." After donating blood, students were treated to cookies, juice, and chocolate turkeys. They also received water bottles as a souvenir and gift for their bravery.

As in recent years, the blood drive proved to be a major success, as there were over 200 donors.

With a big grin on his face, Pooh glows as Eeyore, junior Anna Zbilut, sings high praises of him.

A professional make-up artist held workshops for cast members of Winnie the Pooh. Getting her make-up applied is sophomore Sofia Javed.

Bob, sophomore, and Michael, senior, were the hosts of the Pooh birthday. A birthday party was held in the cafeteria after the weekend performances for the same purpose.

Narrator, junior Jesse Winograd, reads aloud Winnie the Pooh to Christopher Robin. The narrator part was shared between Winograd and senior Seth Bender.

"Pull!" shout the forest animals as they attempt to pull Pooh out. Don't ask.

A reflection of senior Tracy Frey shows the new costumes for her part as the Kangaroo.

Winnie the Pooh, sophomore Joseph Chollampel, comforts Piglet, junior Marsha Suzara. Suzara was also part of last year's children theatre, Kimchi Kid.

Cast and crew of Winnie the Pooh

H a p p y B i r t h d a y , P o o h !

The 1994 Children's Theatre production of Winnie the Pooh transformed the auditorium into a giant forest made of paper maché and ramps. (Nice job, crew!) The Narrator (Seth Bender or Jesse Winograd), reads Christopher Robin (Dan Flood or Michael Jansson) a bedtime story about Winnie the Pooh (Joseph Chollampel). Christopher is then absorbed into the story as Pooh, Rabbit (Sofia Javed), Piglet (Marsha Suzara), Owl (Stephanie Levitt-Greenman), and Eeyore (Anna Zbilut) try to figure out how to deal with the new animals in the forest, Kanga (Tracy Frey) and Roo (Andy Mitosfky). The Tigger, Ostrich, Skunk, and other animals of the forest mainly provided comic relief throughout the play.

The sixty-eighth birthday of Pooh was the main reason why this particular production was chosen. Winnie the Pooh attracted grammar and high school students, and family members of the cast. Pooh and his friends, with their professionally made costumes and make-up, took the audience through a journey of adventure.

After each magnificent performance, a birthday party was thrown for Pooh in the cafeteria for children of all ages.

The director of the Fine Arts and Social Studies department, Coreda Taylor, enlightens the students with her voice. Waves of well-deserved applause echoed through the auditorium after Taylor's performance of "If I Can Help Somebody".

Under the direction of William Koch, the Symphonic Band performs "Amazing Grace". At the assembly, the band supplied the background music for the Martin Luther King slide show.

Students and faculty members give their tiny renditions of "A Vision of America". The speeches, backed by the dramatic playing of the band, shook the audience with power and sentiment.

Senior Jamenda Moss recites a passage from a speech in tribute to Martin Luther King, Jr. Many students and faculty contributed in making this assembly one of the best.

Beautiful Touching Power

On Friday, January thirteenth, Niles West celebrated the birthday of Martin Luther King, Jr. in a double assembly. This powerful assembly had a profound effect on everyone.

It gave students and staff a chance to realize how things have changed over the years. Biology teacher Wayne Rogoski said "I was impressed with the assembly - it made me think back. I grew up in a very racist town. When my grandmother found out I had a job here, she said 'You got negro there?' I've been here longer than I'd like to admit. 99.99% of the student body seemed moved by the assembly from my view. It makes me feel good that the students in large were moved by it, too. It was a fine assembly."

To help make their point clear, there was a combination of a film dedicated to Martin Luther King, Jr., singing by both staff and Choraliers, and a row of multi-cultured people saying how they are each individuals. Some of the songs included "If I Can Help Somebody" and "Amazing Grace", a gospel song which the band played at the end. Everyone did an excellent job at displaying how important it is to be free and equal, especially since Niles West exemplifies a diversely cultured school.

The varsity cheerleaders show their new routine for the Pack the Place assembly. Pack the Place is used to promote school spirit and support the winter sports teams.

Pack It Up

After being dismissed from their last classes on Friday, January 13, anxious students rushed into the contest gym as the Pack the Place assembly was about to begin. Excited winter athletes were ready to show off their abilities in front of the entire school.

To start off, president of Student Union, Senior Nina Swusdipanee said a few words to motivate the students to help them display their school spirit. The captains of all winter sports encouraged everyone to come watch and cheer Niles West to victory.

As the wrestling team performed the art of "Wresketball", the crowd screamed with laughter at the body-slam-dunking. Afterwards, the girls gymnastics team leaped and flipped through the air. Some members of the boys team also displayed their abilities, hoping to encourage other guys to join the team. The crowd was especially pleased with the swim team's performance, where Speedos and scooters were the focus. And finally, the boys and girls basketball teams challenged each other to a match. The girls played hard and proved their worthiness, however, the slam dunk by junior Peter Haralambopoulos with the help of junior Steve Brown ultimately ended the assembly with the students stunned in amazement.

Jill Pasia

Jazz Band member David Reuter prepares his sheet music for the Pack the Place assembly. The band helps cheer on the people at pep assemblies.

Senior Matt Sheahan introduces the sports teams that participate in the Pack the Place assembly. The assembly serves to rouse support for the winter teams.

Sexy junior Steve Neumayer swims to the finish line in his skimpy bathing trunks. During Pack the Place, the swim team performed a mock swim meet for the audience.

Breandan Holmes shoots for the basket while being held back by the opposing team. The wrestling team played a game of "wresketball".

Croatian Vines members Maria Trograncic and Olivia Vojvodic sing to the Croatian dance, Srijem. Croatian Club was one of the groups that had outside help.

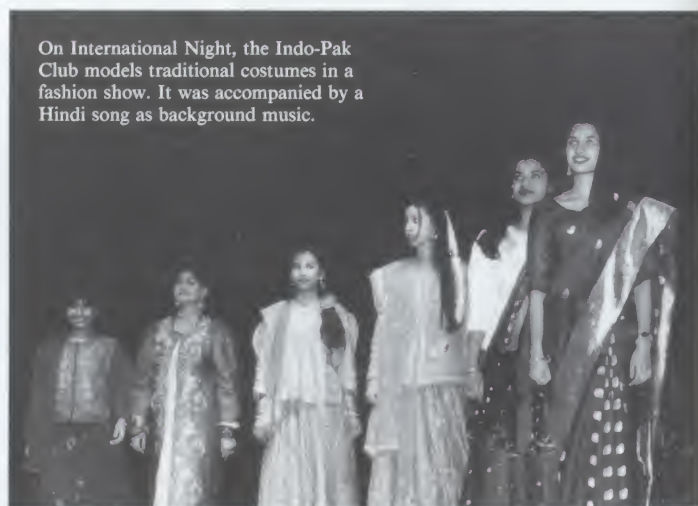

The Japanese Club demonstrates the art of Kendo. Kendo is a Japanese sport of stylized sword play in which bamboo swords are used.

Senior Vicki Vourvahis dances a total of four dances at International Night. Vourvahis is dressed in a traditional Greek costume.

On International Night, the Indo-Pak Club models traditional costumes in a fashion show. It was accompanied by a Hindi song as background music.

Sophomore Korean Club member Helen Hwang performs the Fan Dance for International Night. The Fan Dance expresses the beauty of Korean culture.

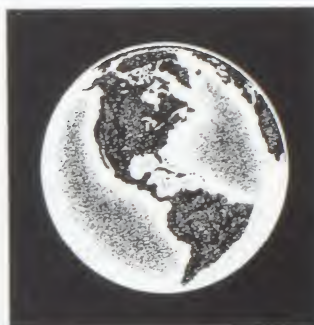

At International Night, senior Sophia Tspianitis, a Hellenic Club member, tries some lasagna, one of the many varieties of food offered. There were dishes from many different ethnicities including: Italian, Croatian, Greek, Polish, Russian, Indian, Chinese, and Thai.

Before International Night, juniors Debbie Choe and Helen Lee set up their multi-cultural foods. The traditional Korean dishes include chop-chae, kimchee, and kim pap.

Dancers performing the Ribbon Dance are wearing palace attendant clothing of ancient China. The Chinese and Thai Club separated into two different acts for fear of confusion between the two cultures.

Around The World In Three Hours

Have you ever gone to a place where the whole world is under one roof? Welcome to International Night 1995, where the food tastes fabulous and the rich cultures brighten the auditorium with dancing, singing, and modeling.

On the PTSA calendar, the event was originally scheduled for February 3. However, a conflict with the drama department moved International Night to January 13, the night of Pack the Place.

With the help of over one hundred students and staff members, International Night occurred in the auditorium, where the sound system actually projected without a hmmm. The crowd cheered loudly as the eleven clubs moved freely around the stage.

The night started young with a feast in the cafeteria. With either $3 or a cultural dish, diners were admitted. The entertainment for the night consisted of the different clubs of Niles West. Except for two acts, performances were choreographed and performed by Niles West students. Multi-colored lighting decorated the stage as Indo-Pak Club presented their fashion show and the Korean Club danced the Fan Dance.

Congratulations to all participating organizations and organizers on a job well done. Perhaps International Night is a step toward world peace. Perhaps????

Following a night of dancing, a group of friends enjoys bowling after leaving the Turnabout dance. The "friends" went home with sore dancing feet, Olive Garden dished in their stomach, and a longer right arm (left for lefties).

Standing cheek-to-cheek, juniors Bill Weinstock and Katie Weiner smile for the camera. Special thanks to Annie Jackson and Lisa Poczowski for their Turnabout pictures. You really saved our necks!

Juniors Brett McGovern, George Rhee, Sam Ur, Adam Ashback, and Erik Carlsen give the camera a big thumbs-up sign. All five friends had been known to be able to make you laugh on the gloomiest days.

While senior David Spitz prays for a strike, junior Erin Moore waits for her ball to return so she can show Spitz just how to throw a bowling ball. It is the '90s, live with it!

Senior David Spitz holds his date, junior Annie Jackson, while the photographer snaps a picture. The theme for Turnabout was "Saturday Night Fever", based on one of the cheesiest movies of all time.

Turnabout Is Fair Play

On February 25, the gym went through an amazing change. Disco came back in a blaze of lights and smoke. People danced and had a groovy and far-out time. No, it wasn't the class of 1978 reunion, it was . . . Turnabout!

After months of planning, the Student Union's hard work finally paid off. Students flooded the gym for the annual dance, which reverses traditional roles. That is, girls ask guys. The theme for Turnabout, "Saturday Night Fever", came through in everything from the music to the decorations.

Most students not only attended the dance, they also had a night out on the town. Many went out to eat either before or after the dance. Some people even participated in various other activities. "Afterwards, we went to see 'Legends of the Fall'," said junior George Tavoularis. One group even went bowling. "We went to the 94th Aero Squadron and out to Denny's for dessert," said senior Melanie Christensen.

Student Union sponsors the event, which they start planning shortly after Homecoming. They order decorations in the fall to ensure plenty of time for delivery and assembly. Union even hired a Dj who used a special lighting system.

The night was a blast for everyone. Everyone got a chance to go back in time, and guys got a chance to relax and let the girls take care of everything.

Juniors Suzi Jusufi, Lainie Manta, Melissa Taormina, Shana Quinn, and Lisa Pocztowski pose for a picture before leaving for the dance. Sometimes the best part of the dance is checking out the many gorgeous dresses. Of course, there are special cases when the dresses were just a tad too gorgeous.

Returning from her doctor's visit, Roxie Hart proudly announces that she is definitely pregnant. Senior Stephanie Levitt-Greenman played Roxie, the woman accused of murdering her lover, Fred Casely.

Jurors Kira Keegstra, Leia Stangland, Alan Lewis, and Amanda McCormick stand afar engrossed in the murder trial of Roxie Hart's lover. The cast of "Chicago" was the largest of the year which provided a great opportunity for all students to get involved.

Senior Seth Bender belts out the number "Razzle Dazzle" just before the start of the murder trial of Fred Casely. Bender played Roxie Hart's sleazy lawyer, Billy Flynn, in the musical.

During the dramatic court trial in "Chicago", Roxie Hart (senior Staphanie-Levitt Greenman) Struggles between her lover Fred Casely (sophomore Matt Jeans) and her husband Amos Hart (senior Dmitry Burdein). Over forty crew members worked to make "Chicago" a success in such areas as props and lighting.

Senior Stephanie Levitt-Greenman as Roxie Hart sings on stage about her supposed baby while fellow cast members surrounded her in mere diapers and baby bonnets. Roxie, in actuality wasn't pregnant. She only pretended she was because she wanted fame and glory no matter what the cost.

All That Jazz

Glitter, glamour, jazzy musical numbers, sequined costumes, and snazzy dialogue. Put them all together, and what do you get? Chicago, the annual spring musical!

As one walked into the auditorium, a barely lit stage covered with silver mylar concealed a swinging, 1920's jazz band. Shortly after the audience took their seats, the house lights went off and a single spotlight shined upon the stage. Into this light, stepped the master of ceremonies, sophomore Melissa Venn. The spotlight swung across the stage, illuminating various scenes of corruption, murder, and adultery. "Five, Six, Seven, Eight!"

As the play opened, the audience witnessed the murder of Fred Casely. This murder led to the imprisonment and the trial of one Roxie Hart. Throughout Roxie's ordeals, a myriad of colorful characters passed before the audience's eyes. Among these characters are fellow cellmate and limelight lover Velma Kelly, unsavory lawyer Billy Flynn, transvestite reporter Mary Sunshine, jail warden Mama Morton, and Roxie's sap of a husband, Amos. These people helped deliver the play's underlying message, crime pays.

The audience was not the only group of people who enjoyed Chicago. Members of the cast and crew alike had a ball putting on the play. "I remember when the headset broke during a show and we had to pass them from Karina to me to Theodora to Colleen," replied sophomore crew member Jenny Abbasi.

For two hours, Chicago transported everyone back to another time. They went to a time when criminals were celebrities and people wore large diapers. (Maybe it was not that different after all?) So the roaring '20's came and went, leaving behind a bunch of slinky, shiny costumes, a ton of sparkling mylar, and a lifetime of memories.

Heidi Eichler

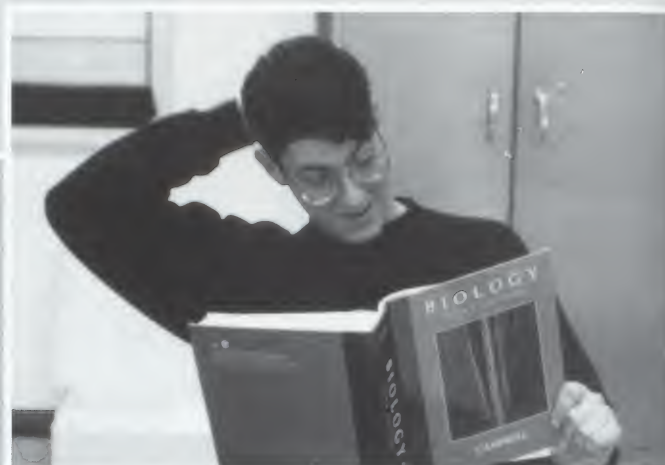

Members of the jury lean forward to better hear all the juicy gossip brought forth at the "Chicago" trial. Jurors Stacey Lucas, Suzanne Suss, Nicole Sutherland, and Beth Dobrowolski participated in the opening number "All That Jazz".

Senior Jennifer Bergstrom wows the crowd as top dog Velma Kelly from the play "Chicago." Velma ended up in jail for the murder of her sister and her lover.

Senior Mike Farr attentively studies his biology. Although teachers' objectives include homework, most students are known to leave work until the next day.

Senior Rick Holler stops a while to talk to Jennifer DeGuzman, but not during a passing period. New rules, including the "closed halls" rule, provide many students with unstimulating and pretty pointless Saturday morning detentions.

Seniors Kim Wallin and Jennifer Matik paint their faces to support their class. The Midnight Riders is a group involved in promoting school spirit.

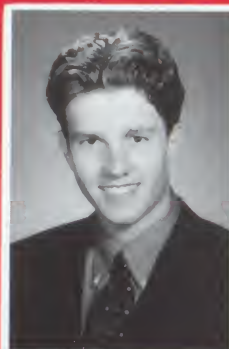

Senior Luis Gormaz received an injury during the Homecoming Football game. Gormaz has been a member of the football team for four years.

Our Last Day

Our very last day is drawing near the final day of our senior year
A time to laugh, a time to cry
but never time to say good-bye
Our friends always knew the right things to do and say
Now the day has come
the day is finally here
We always thought we couldn't wait but now we're all in tears
Because we want just one more day to tell our friends good-bye
It could be awhile before we see them again and we can't help but cry
We're not completely sure of what to do or say
But if we had a wish we'd wish for another day

Advanced Placement Or Advanced Pressure?

Along with the social wonders of senior year come the academic blunders. Though some seniors take the easy way out by simply taking electives their last year, others are not so fortunate. Hoping to obtain college credit, many seniors take advanced placement classes, which are not only challenging and time-consuming, but stressful as well. Some of the advanced placement teachers' main focus is to prepare students for the dreaded AP exams in May. Others, however, treat the class as any other, but expect their students to work at a quicker pace.

Though obtaining college credit is a definite plus, taking AP classes takes a toll, however big or little, on seniors. "In my book, AP stands for advanced pressure. With four advanced placement classes, I have never been so stressed out in my life," responded Tracy Frey when asked about AP classes. With a simple mention of the words advanced placement, Karen Malina replied, "Ugh!" Other seniors, however, try to look on the bright side when taking such challenging courses. Sang Kim says, "I get such an adrenaline rush in all my AP classes. Especially in one class, in which we are learning the deviating sexual preferences of Richard III."

So, however challenging, advanced placement classes do have their pros and cons. They offer students the chance to excel by obtaining college credit, but that is only if a respectable score is received on the test itself. Also, it should be admitted that AP classes look quite good on college applications. Whatever the reason many seniors choose to take these classes, it can be inferred that their last year will be filled with little sleep and a lot of stress.

Building up his muscles, senior Renato Kiam works out as senior David Mitria spots him. The weight and fitness rooms are open to students and teachers daily before and after school.

Senior Sarah Kim finishes up her homework in home room. Many students find the ten-minute homeroom period useful to do their homework or socialize with friends.

Senior Marlene Saavedra applies face paint on senior Freddy Delgado to get into the spirit of Halloween. A variety of costumes are displayed by students on this holiday.

Playing Favorites

Throughout the course of a high school career, students develop special relationships with their teachers. Some students favor specific teachers for specific reasons. Whether a student likes a teacher for his or her personality or teaching methods, students have many reasons why they especially like a particular teacher.

For Valerie Gajewski, her favorite teacher is, "Ms. Magee because she's a good teacher and she's a lot of fun. Also she's very helpful."

Parvez Siddiqui liked Madame Cowan for a different reason. "She's the best because she gives out the best stickers- penguins, dinosaurs, Garfield and Elmer Fudds."

Two students named Mr. Schwarz as their favorite teacher, each for a different reason. Mehmet Uygun said that he was his favorite because, "You can do anything you want in his class." Ronnie Friedman liked him because, "He's balding and he doesn't care."

Maria Masalis chose Mr. Kolze as her favorite because, "He's very outgoing and hilarious. Also, he loves Indiana (University) and he hates Notre Dame."

Kelly Irwin liked Mr. Flynn saying, "He's more like a student than a teacher."

Whether it's a teacher's style, personality, or enthusiasm, students will develop fondness to certain teachers. Throughout his or her career, every teacher is bound to be someone's favorite teacher one time.

What's Hot, What's Not

One of the most consistent things in life is how fads come and go. What is "in" one day may be "out" as soon as a few months go by. According to the Class of '95, here's what's hot and what's not:

Hot

Hiking/combat boots
Natural Hair
Flannel Shirts
College sweatshirts
Scrunchies
Fossil watches
Body piercing
Knee socks

Carpe Diem: Seize The Day

"What am I going to do with my life?" asked senior Hena Shamim. Many students wonder about their future with a blank and gray mind. At an age where one can smoke and drive, students live life one day at a time. Somewhere within the day, probably in a math class, certain students find themselves thinking about tomorrow and the day after that and the day after that. When the subject happens to pop up in their brains, fluffy clouds of white crowd their thinking spaces. They really have no idea what they will be doing in the future. THAT is their biggest question of the future.

Shamim stated, "I plan to major in English and go to medical school and become a brilliant doctor." Though the big picture is drawn-out by many students, no one really knows what is around the next corner of life. Shamim admitted, "I don't know if I'm actually going to do this, but this is my plan as of right now."

Stop, look, live it. We, the students of Niles West High School, are supposed to be worryless teenagers of the 90's. We, in some parents' minds, live for the moment and in the fast lane. Live your life. Smile. The I'm-going-to-eat-at-6:44AM type of person is fine, but do you want to be him/her? The world is full of surprises, live for yourself and no one else. Seize your future when it comes, but before it does, have fun. Be teenagers!

Time Flies

My, my, how time flies! Well it seems as if it was just yesterday the class of '95 was walking for the first time through the doors of West. Now it will not be long until those same frightened freshmen will be walking proudly with a diploma in their hand.

Freshman year was a whole new beginning for many. It was a time for new friendships and a chance to expand their horizons. Soon the class of '95 became the more experienced ones as sophomore year rolled around the corner. Proud of their new-found status, they walked with their heads held high. They also took great offense to the word "freshman". Junior year came only too soon, and with it, a barrage of college entrance exams. Many found junior year overwhelming, yet maintained their sanity on the fact that they had only one more year.

Now that last and special year has befallen on the class of '95. With this year comes mixed emotions, as some must say goodbye to friends and others are simply thrilled to get out of high school. Whatever the case, these past four years have passed quite fast, maybe too fast. Seniors can now move on to bigger and hopefully better things, yet most will never forget their past few years at West.

The Art Of Staying Awake

Have you ever thought about how many holes are in the ceiling? Not many people worry about these things, but when you're sitting in a class that bores you to tears, you need to have something to focus your attention on so the teacher does not catch you sleeping in class. Sophia Tsipianitis is one senior who says, "I count the holes in the ceiling tiles to stay awake."

Some very talented seniors space out and manage to look like they're paying attention to a lecturing teacher when really their minds are on other subjects. Two of these seniors, Suchila Tienchai and Lani Perea, focus on important people in their lives. "I think of Keanu Reeves in that white t-shirt that he wore in 'Speed'," says Suchila with a devilish grin. Lani states, "I think about my boyfriend, Marc."

Many seniors take the bold approach to this situation. When confronted with the question "How do you stay awake in class?", senior Elias Peroulas replied with a smirk, "I don't!" Yes, it's true, most seniors don't care if they're caught dosing off in class. One senior, Lana Beyrak, however, does attempt to keep herself from sleeping during a class, "I try not to close my eyes at all, whatever the cost. If I blink, I am gone!"

Senior Year: Welcome To The Good Life

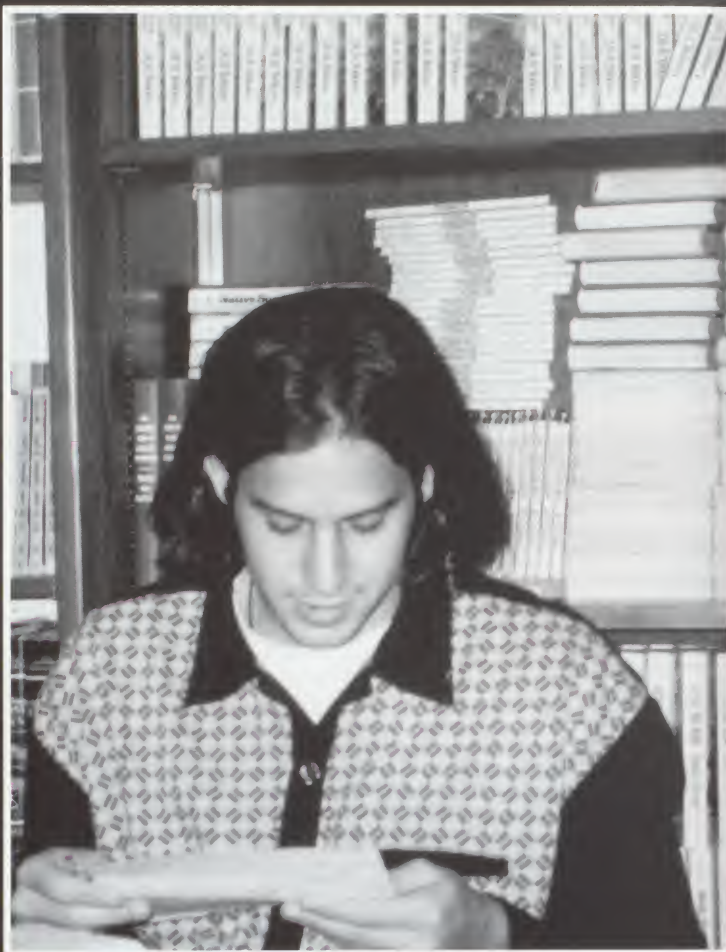

What defines an average senior? The average senior has no worries, a carefree life, and rules the school. "Senior year is so much fun. It is all that I expected senior year to be and even more. I am also more involved in clubs and activities this year than I was before," said senior Danielle Comrov. Seniors get involved. They join all kinds of clubs and activities and try to make the most of their last year. Senior year provides them with one last chance to do everything they want to do in school.

Just about everyone enjoys their final year of high school. "Senior year rules. For myself, college is taken care of and there is no pressure, nothing to look forward to," replies senior Shannon Moore.

"Out of all of the four years, senior year is the best. It is scary, yet thrilling at the same time," remarked seniors Guinevere Tiffin and Anne Czupryna. Another senior, Jiyoun Chung, finds senior year surprising, different from what she expected. "Most people expect senior year to be really easy. For me, though, it isn't. AP classes are really hard. All in all, though, I like senior year," said Jiyoun.

Each senior has a completely unique personality. Senior year can be anything people choose to make it and senior year turns out a little bit differently for everyone. In general, though, the average senior leads a charmed life and spends his or her last year enjoying the good life.

Better Off Forgotten

Seniors like to forget about their most embarrassing moments. Why wouldn't they? By the time senior year rolls around, they're supposed to know the ropes and act like they have all the self-confidence in the world. That includes obtaining a very selective memory so they can forget all about those not-so-seniorish episodes that occurred in their high school lives. Although most seniors have managed to obtain that selective memory, here are a select few who haven't.

"My first time at range, I was doing really well until there was five minutes left of class. I was coming around the last curve, but I didn't turn my wheel enough, so my front and back right wheels went up the snow bank and got stuck. My Driver's Ed. teacher had to pull the car out. Later, I started hearing rumors that I fainted and that he had to call 911. My teacher never let me forget it. He called me 'Crash' the rest of the year!"

Tanveer Najiullah

"I was wearing mega-high heels one day when I was a sophomore. My heel caught the stair and I went tumbling down. The worst part was, the guy I had a crush on saw me. They never let me live it down."

Valerie Parreno

"During the swimming unit in gym, I led the sophomores. They were playing water basketball, and one of the girls threw the ball over the deck. So I got the ball and was ready to throw it back, but then I slipped. My arms flung around and around and before I knew it, I was right above the water, and I splashed right on in. Word around school went so fast, and now the gym class always asks me if I would like to join them in the water. Ha! Ha!"

Angie Sideris

Of course, seniors try to demolish especially embarrassing moments like these from their brains. But everyone has embarrassing moments, whether they happened as freshmen or as seniors. Right now, the most embarrassing moments created in high school act as the ones that seniors want to have erased from their memories the most. Nonetheless, in reality, those are the only memories of their high school years that will follow them when they leave high school and venture forth into the "real world".

The Senior Plague

Senioritis . . . the disease that every unsuspecting senior obtains. Its symptoms vary from dozing off in every other class to being totally ignorant to the word homework.

Seniors often arrive at school in a daze, dreading the day before them, and then leaving for home without a textbook in hand. For some seniors, senioritis has ironically hit them as far back as freshman year. "Senioritis can strike anyone, anytime. I have had it since freshman year, but senior year has got to be the worst. I just don't care about homework and stuff, but when test time comes, the studious senior is back," commented Hena Shamim.

Other seniors are inflicted with senioritis for a part of the year, usually second semester. A college has already accepted them, so they feel that all their worries are far behind them. Jane Choe says, "It's normal for everyone because after four years, we can finally blow off and enjoy the rest of our last year in high school. After getting accepted to a college, we don't have anymore worries, our burdens are lifted, and we can concentrate on just having fun."

Though the cure for senioritis has not been discovered, seniors do their best to cope with it. However, life would be easier if their teachers had a little more understanding. After all, they were also diagnosed with senioritis, way back when.

Hard Work, Well Spent?

Where do you work and how do you spend your money? Seniors tell what they think their money is best spent on. Many seniors spend their hard earned money on everyday needs but spoiling themselves always prevailed.

Aileen Aprieto: "I try to save most of my money but other times I just spend it on myself."

Aki Younan: "Clothes, clothes, and more clothes."

David Mitria: "I spend my money on the weekends and gas."

Two out of every six senior survey participants tended to work at a grocery store. Other popular work places include fast food restaurants and specialty stores. Although money seems great to have, there is less time for one to socialize. Seniors who hold part time jobs learn responsibility and manage their time wisely. Working shifts mainly started at three o'clock to about eight or nine o'clock. After coming home from work, they rest, do homework, and finish chores. As one can see there is not much spare time left. Therefore these seniors deserve every cent of their pay checks. They reward themselves by spending their money anyway they want.

Post High School Plans

As seniors say their goodbyes to leaving high school, they often realize that they have to start thinking of the future. "What should I do?" Should I go to college?" "Should I get a job?"

Many seniors are college-oriented. For example, Maria Boodris said, "I want to go to Illinois State to major in business." Saleem Umar exclaimed, "I am going to the University of Illinois Champaign to major in pre-medicine."

Others like Maria and Saleem have even gone further and already decided what occupation they want to have. For instance, "I am going to the University of Illinois-Champaign to major in biology and eventually become a veterinarian," said Tracy Frey.

On the other hand, some are still not sure which college they want to attend, but they have already chosen a career path. Lorin Kim stated, "I am not positive what college I am going to, but I would like to major in liberal arts."

Some people even thought they wanted to go abroad. Maria Masalis exclaimed, "I want to go to Europe and major in hotel management."

In conclusion, everybody's future is different. Whether you know where you want to go or are still deciding, start planning ahead. The future plans may determine your life, so plan ahead and make your life a good one.

When The Last Bell Rings

You may find yourself wondering at times why there are so many seniors in the cafeteria after-school. Many of them just hang around waiting for sports to begin. Senior Sara Guetzlaff says, "I participate in after-school sports or I work."

Some seniors have other after-school obligations. Seniors who have cars often are required to pick up younger siblings who attend other schools. One such helpful senior, Sara Gonzalez stated, "When I do not go home and do homework, I go to pick up my brother from Notre Dame."

Many seniors work after school to ease the cost of college for their parents, or just to earn extra spending cash for the week-ends. Lee Adelson is one of these seniors; "I either go to work or play football or baseball or something."

Then, of course, there are those seniors who do not have a definite after-school schedule. Senior Lucie Chwal fits into this category. "Sometimes I go to work, do things around the house, go to sleep, or watch "Tiny Toons" or old reruns of "The Three Stooges." Notice no mention of homework.

Whether participating in sports or club meetings, studying academics, running errands for family members, or working, one thing is certain, seniors keep themselves busy after-school.

King Of The Mountain

After a long, humiliating struggle from the depths of freshman year, seniors have climbed up from the bottom of the hill, having pennies flung at their heads during assemblies, and emerged at the top of the mountain; though possibly bruised, to the esteemed position of penny-thrower.

Many advantages come with senior status. Seniors know the ropes. They experience it all and can tell a story, usually a long one, about any occasion — from embarrassing freshman moments to ACT horrors. One senior, Josh Manaois, said, "I like being a senior because I know all the tricks to getting out of class and detentions. I also know which teachers not to mess with and which teachers are really cool.

With such a position, of course, comes great responsibility. Seniors have to prepare for college, fill out applications and set up interviews. Other seniors make different plans for their futures. Some seniors, actually most of them, simply breathe a great sigh of relief, thankful their last year has finally come to a terrific end. To the senior class — best of luck in whatever the future might have in store. So keep your heads held high, seniors, and wherever you end up, may you always stand on top of the mountain.

Ten Years Into The Future

Ten years is a lot of time. In ten years, we could have three new presidents, a few wars, the Cubs could have thirty new managers, and a cure for AIDS or cancer could be found. In ten years, most of the class of '95 will have found their place in society. Some will become doctors or lawyers, and others might be teachers or just your everyday businessperson. Some will be married with children or maybe not married with children and others will still be single. Here are some responses from seniors on where they think they will be in ten years

"I will be the late-night Taco Cop at the Taco Bell on Harlem."

Matt Sheahan

"I will be happily married with two kids"

Kelly Geimer

Mother, Please!

Just when you thought that you are an adult, your parents come down hard on you about something that you bought. It seems like when you are ready to rise among your friends with this "cool" item, your parents burst your bubble by saying, "NO". Junior Brian Hayden recalls, "My parents did not like a CD that said 'explicit language' on the cover, so they made me return it."

Of course, there are also the weird parents that are more "hip" than you. Telling you how to dress, they made salesperson angry with millions of exchange slips. "I bought this black dress. My mom said something like, 'That dress covers too much, and it doesn't reveal anything.' So my mom made me return it!" said junior Gina Ferentz.

Junior Shaun McAuley remembers, "When I was about nine or ten years old, I bought some stuff from Uncle Dan's Army and Navy Store. My mom made me return it."

There are also those of us who walk down the paths of life alone. We make believe that when our parents talk, the words are really evaporating into thin air. "It was, I think, a really expensive pair of jeans. They hated it, but I did not return it," states junior Lisa Godeman.

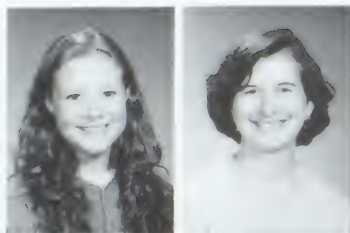

Junior Anna Zbilut adds, "Even if they (the parents) don't like it (the item bought), I wouldn't return it." Rebel!

Through this pathetic excuse of a story, I have added an additional two hundred thirty words to the yearbook.

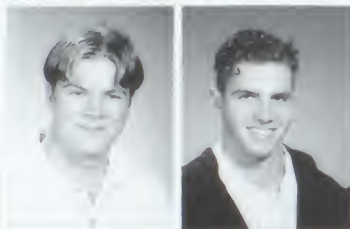

Pin Lin

Where's Your Homework, Mr. Toby?

"I swear, my dog ate it," is a common excuse students give their teachers when their homework is not finished. Some students believe that homework has no point, thus, homework excuses are born.

Silly excuses such as, "Little green aliens like monsters came and took me to Mars when I was walking home", or, "It was a really windy day, and it blew away", are more creative than others. The old stand-bys like, "I took the wrong book home," or, "I was really sick and was unable to complete the assignment", and anything beginning with, "You will not believe what happened . . ." are even less-likely to be believed by doubting teachers.

When asked, juniors told some of their favorite homework excuses. Anna Zbilut says, "My head exploded, so I couldn't finish my homework." Eddie Rodriguez takes a much more serious approach when he says, "I didn't do my homework because I got in a car accident. Or, someone died."

This is just a sample of the excuses juniors give their teachers. Homework excuses have been around since homework began, and they will continue to be around for as long as school is in existence. Therefore, students will keep getting more outrageous in their excuse-devising and teachers will continue to be ever-skeptical.

Friends and family pull you through hard times whether you realize or not.

The faces that you see when you are dying from the rattlesnake bite from the snake that popped out of your toilet are of your supporters. The smiles that you see when the hair-dryer in your hand goes haywire are of your loved one. (It might also be your future murder, but that is another story.)

Like Dr. Roger Stein said at the beginning of the year, take some time to tell someone that you appreciate them being there. (This is so mushy, that I am starting to get the shivers.) A phrase of advice from a young, wise lady, "Tell someone that you love them, and they will love you back ten times more."

Future Colleges

The future starts with education. Education includes reading, studying, everyday life, and, of course, college. How are colleges chosen? Why do people want to attend a certain college? Is it because of the subjects or sports offered, the excellent achievement rates, or is it because of the family members who attended there?

Junior year, the most important year of someone's high school years, is the time to decide on a college. After the SAT and ACT scores start arriving at the various houses, one can hear parents lecturing about the importance of college five blocks away. How do these young adults decide? Some juniors share their choice(s) of college and their reason for wanting to attend:

"Columbia offers subjects that apply to my future." -Brian Hayden

"I want to go to University of Illinois, Ohio State, or Notre Dame.

They're pretty good at academics and O.K. at sports." -Shaun McAuley

"When I do get my SAT and ACT scores, I want to send my application to Northwestern and Loyola because I want to get into pre-med." -Shabaz Kazi

"Illinois State University is a good school. My cousin went there. I have been there before, I have seen what it looks like, and I like it. I have seen the parties, too!" -Lisa Godeman

"I want to go to a university because they offer more majors. Colleges only specialize in a few departments, whereas universities if you change your mind about what you want to be, you have more choices to switch to. And they also have to have a varsity swim team." -Gina Ferentz

With five billion schools out there to pick from, juniors are going to have a very pressured year. Thank goodness, we are not all juniors. What am I talking about? I am a junior. Where do I want to go????.....

Playing a serious game of basketball during leaders' gym are junior leaders. For anyone that is interested, leaders' gym looks very good on college applications.

Looking Forward To School

You wake up in the morning and realize that you completely forgot about that big English paper that counts for half of your grade and is due today! Just as you start to panic, you realize something. You have a German field trip today! You're saved!

Everyone loves field trips, right? After all, you get out of school for a day, what could be better?!? Not all field trips turn out as wonderful as hoped, though. Some field trips are so awful, even the thought of your friends stuck in geometry doesn't bring a smile to your face.

What makes a great field trip? Does where you eat or who you're with determine a great field trip? Or is the fact that you are getting out of school all that matters? Some people really are just so happy to be out of school, they don't care where they go or what they do. Others, however, feel that missing chemistry just isn't reason enough.

"During sophomore year, we went on a field trip in Mr. Heintz's class to see some play. It was so boring. Everyone kept falling asleep," commented junior Amy Albrecht.

Senior Karen Malina agrees. "In order for a field trip to be fun, you need a cool teacher and your friends with you."

Most students agree that there are many things that go into the making of a great field trip. Of course, getting to miss school just makes the whole thing a little sweeter.

Leaders' gym, is it a class or a fun period? To many people, it is a fun period where athletic people compete with each other in different sports. That is not true. "Leaders' gym is a class which give students a chance to discover leadership and self esteem," stated physical education teacher John Armour.

"Many people receive some self esteem and get more involved," says junior Soeng Ha. Many students get involved in activities or improve certain skills through their new, more stable images of themselves. To get into leaders' gym, one must have "the" grades and must be recommended by their past year gym teacher. Many students have to wait till second semester junior year to become a

P leader. However, different reasons of anticipation was expressed. "I can't wait till second semester starts, so I can boss the freshmen around," confessed junior Marko Ratic with a grin.

O Leaders' students are given the same credits as regular gym students, but since they are expected to be more athletic, their grades are based on the harder scale. Leaders' students receive their "A" for helping gym teachers and participation in class. Of course, there are always two sides to every story. "This is a blow off class," replied senior Jeremy McCormick. "It would be better if we didn't have to wear the bright red shirts with the big white words, 'Niles West'." In conclusion, leaders' gym is both a class and a recess period for some students.

Ask any sophomore the question "What's the best thing about being a sophomore?", and they'll simply tell you that it's not being a loser freshman anymore. (Sorry freshmen, but even you have to admit that it was no fun being at the bottom!) Of course there were the fun times of freshman year, but, as always, with everything good comes something bad. There weren't necessarily

One

Step

Higher

bad things to freshman year, but there are those things you're glad you won't have to live through anymore. According to Joel Manansala, "One of the great things about being a sophomore is not being humiliated by the seniors on senior prank day. That's a torturous day for freshmen." Another great thing about being a sophomore is that there are less embarrassing moments. Andrea Braovac says, "A good thing about sophomore year is that we are the ones throwing the pennies, and not having them thrown at us." There also come more privileges to sophomore year. To Jill Pasia, it means that "I'm one year closer to getting my license." All in all, sophomore year does beat out freshman year. Freshman year is not a bad one, it'll probably be one of the most fun ones, but being a sophomore is better because it means having more advantages and freedom.

Finally! Pep Assemblies From The Other Side

Sophomore year is the year when all the excitement of high school comes to a halt. Freshman year was about new experiences and new friends, but once sophomore year rolls around, boredom becomes a major factor. During those times, the average sophomore will then worry about the approach of junior year, where boredom will not be possible because of an immense amount of homework. Then again, there are those who take it in stride and see junior year as one more step towards graduation.

Students take basic, regular, or honors courses until their sophomore year. Then, during their junior year, students have the opportunity to take advanced placement classes. These classes are college level courses and will truly challenge their sleeping hours. Even if students choose not to take AP classes, their regular classes become much more difficult anyway once junior year rolls around. As sophomore Jenny Abbasi says, "Junior year will be the most painful year of high school because we start taking those hideous AP's!" Then there are those who actually look forward to junior year with a positive attitude. "Next year I'm gonna work my 'rear end' off and come out with some pretty decent grades!" exclaims sophomore Eric Vassilatos.

Thinking of junior year gives many the jitters. That's the year when colleges really start looking at you and slacking off is no longer an option. Many sophomores simply go with the philosophy of enjoying the present while there's no pressure. Since Kopsombut looks forward to junior year because, "I get to drive and then I'll only have one year till graduation." I guess the most successful way to get through junior year is by taking it one step at a time and thinking towards one final goal . . . graduation.

On September 13, following a brief assembly in the auditorium, teachers led the members of the sophomore class to a special assembly in the gym. Upon entering the gym, each student was handed a packet containing information on ordering class rings. After a slide show which combined photos of sophomores and advertisement shots of Josten's rings, the Josten's representative spoke.

The packets held everything a student would need to know to design and purchase the perfect class ring. Buying a ring that represented a person's true self was no easy task. After choosing the style of ring and what was going to be on it, students also had to choose what stone they wanted, what cut they wanted for the stone and numerous other little details. All of the decisions could make a person crazy!

In the end, though, all of the frustration paid off. On November 8, the Josten's ring man returned with the finished products! Students were instructed to come to the area by the Wall of Fame between 10:00 and 1:00 to pick up their rings. Except for a few mistakes, just about everyone was pleased with their ring.

"I bought a school ring because I really wanted one. A school ring is a great way to remember your high school years. Your ring really expresses who you are and what you stand for," said sophomore Beth Dobrowolski.

Heidi Eichler

"I like this one the best," sophomore Laura Dema tells her friend Kara Kezios. The ring company, Jostens, also provides rings for the Bulls and other professional sport teams.

Judy Leavitt examines fellow sophomore Jenny Lau's new class ring. Students can put anything on their rings from their name to their zodiac signs.

Practice

Two of the most important tests students take during high school are the ACT and SAT. To prepare for these tests, many sophomores take the PLAN and/or PSAT tests. These tests give students the chance to get used to the format of the college entrance tests and to discover which areas need the most work.

Makes

The PSAT, which helps prepare students for the SAT, took place on Saturday, October 15, from 7:30 to 10:30 A.M. By submitting an envelope with their names, i.d. and homeroom numbers, and an $8.00 fee, students guaranteed themselves a place in the testing room.

The PLAN was given on Wednesday, November 2, from 7:30 to 10:30 A.M. The cost for the PLAN, which prepares students for the ACT, was $7.00. Later the school announced that it would pay the fee for students taking the PLAN.

Perfect

Both exams had tests in math, science, English, and reading. These tests, which sophomores were strongly urged to take, allow students to get ready for the future. When the results come in, guidance counselors review the information with the students. This can help the students understand which areas they need to concentrate on and which career fields they would be best suited.

Freshmen 'X' Not Us!

Finally, the horrors of your freshman year are over. You have endured the humility and the pain of being a freshman. You've grown in many ways. You've grown into a sophomore. Finally, a life without constant teasing; or is it? What happens when you're a sophomore? Do sophomores get picked on like the freshmen?

"It is fun to be a sophomore. You have more privileges than a freshman. You have the chance to get off-campus," said Ashish Gandhi. Jimmy Melios said, "It's better to be a sophomore than a freshman. We don't get picked on anymore."

Being a freshman is very tough. You don't know what to expect. It is hard adjusting to the change from your junior high school to high school. But all of that is over now.

Sophomore year brings you one step closer to being an upperclassmen. Other students give you more respect than they did before. "I couldn't wait for my sophomore year because I get to drive," said Lucy Parreno. Sophomores who are sixteen have the option of taking driver's education. There are also other special privileges and responsibilities that go along with being a sophomore.

Although every year in high school is memorable, sophomore year can be considered the first big stepping stone towards graduating from the confinement of hearing bells every forty minutes.

Getting Around The Town

After five long restless days spent in school each week, students like to sit back and enjoy their weekend. Whether it be going out to parties or just seeing a movie, one thing remains a problem ... RIDES! Most always, students find it hard to get around if they don't drive. Unfortunately, for some students sophomore year just means another long wait until it's their turn behind the wheel. If so, just how exactly do these students get around town??

According to sophomore Joel Manansala,

"I usually get rides from Mike Cimmarusti's mom. She's really nice so whenever we need a ride to somewhere, she always ends up taking us!" However, it's not always that easy. Maria Trograncic replied, "When I'm in need of a ride, I put on the sweetest little act and mooch someone!"

Although mooching rides from friends is probably the most popular form of transportation, sophomore Christine Moen certainly objects. "Let's put it this way - any guy I see,

I get a ride from!" Even a person's physical aspect is taken into consideration when mooching rides.

So the next time you need transportation to get somewhere, you have three things to rely on — parents, friends, and even strangers! (However, the last choice is not highly recommended.) And if all else fails, just spend a quiet evening at home.

Tricks Of The Trade

Those clumsy freshmen days are over. Now, sophomores can get around the school knowing a few tricks that they picked up their freshman year. Tricks are highly beneficial in themselves, but may cause a slight disadvantage to the trickees.

The chair snatching in the cafe was always a problem. But sophomores learned to save their own chairs, as well as steal others. Kevin Jeong advises, "What I do is I look around and wait until someone just stands up, then I pull the chair away and sit on it as if it was always mine. No one ever has the nerve to ask me if I have their chair because I look so natural."

Another problem is trying to get down the long science wings on time if you're coming from art. "I've found it faster by tripping down or rolling down the ramp on the second floor wing," laughs sophomore Rehana Patel.

Another even more strenuous problem is the congested hallways. Sasha Burch suggests, "Since I'm short, I keep screaming MIDGET, MIDGET, MIDGET coming through! And people let me through." Then again, Nick Dallas only needs to yell, "GENIUS, GENIUS, GENIUS coming through!"

Most of these tricks seem a little outrageous, but they really do work! To get around the school successfully, these tricks of the trade are very helpful. But they're not necessary. The average student doesn't have to trip to science, or scream midget down the halls. In fact, many students get by pretty well being normal and polite, but the tricks and trickers add a nice spice to the school.

Beginning high school, students often divide into little cliques. They start hanging out with a certain crowd, dressing a certain way, and acting a certain way. This is known to happen to many of the freshmen.

In Niles West High School there are a variety of different cliques. They range from breakers to the every day Joe. As you start high school a group of people take you into their clique. You soon start spending more time with them and disregarding your other friends who aren't in your little group. "Clique" is often thought of as an offensive word, however it can bring friends closer together. They form a close-knit family away from home. People in the same clique often turn out to be the friends you have for life.

Most cliques consist of people who have things in common. For example, some people of the same nationalities stick together. People involved in the same activities, such as sports and clubs, form cliques. Sometimes people who dress alike stick together. On the other hand, many other cliques form for totally different reasons.

In conclusion, a clique can be thought of as a positive aspect of high school. We should encourage the formation of cliques. And to all the incoming freshmen, look forward to meeting a group of lasting friends.

What is with the freshmen these days anyway? Most of them walk around with their high and mighty attitudes, mouthing off to their superiors and elder classmates. A few years ago, the freshmen knew their places. You could always spot a freshman passing timidly by the senior section in the cafeteria at lunch. Now the freshmen sit in the senior section! Who exactly do they think they are? Each year the condition worsens. The high school structure is deteriorating, with seniors on the top and little seniors at the bottom of the chain. Not only is their self esteem too high but the effort put into schoolwork is lacking. If students slack off the first year, what do freshmen have to look forward to before graduation? The problem is the younger students are not thinking much about their futures. They think they have all the time in the world to worry about what is going to happen to them and what they want to do, so they put off homework, detentions, and other responsibilities.

Just a bit of advice to all freshmen (and potential freshmen): Your high school years are meant to be fun, but they also have to prepare you for college. Four years may seem like a long time to start preparing, but as soon as you turn around, these years will be a fading memory. Don't waste this time, it is important.

Freshman Katy Lee and sophomore Jason Park enjoy a nice refreshing Coke-Cola Classic after a stressful debate meet. Many clubs, such as debate, are not recognized as the hard working, accomplished organizations that they really are.

Freshman Jovan Vojcic waits to see the new dean, Judy Yacker, about his cut slip. The computers have been updated to save paper, using only one sheet per student per day.

With a twinkle in her eyes, freshman Anna Zajac projects her voice through the echoless auditorium. Chorus involves more than just "singing", it also introduces students to tone production, breathing, diction, lend, and sight-reading.

Freshmen James Tipton and Sabrina Krzak receive help from math teacher Bob Murphy. Most teachers are available for help to all students during troublesome times.

Market

Entering your freshmen year, one of the first things you notice is the opposite sex. In junior high, there are a limited amount of boys and girls. However, there are about two thousand students attending Niles West. On their first day of school, freshmen were overwhelmed by the enormous amount of students.

"There is so many of them, and boy, are they FINE!" Mandy Taheny exclaimed. But now-a-days freshmen are not just interested in looks. They have grown a lot since junior high and they are not as immature and superficial as they used to be.

"The first thing I notice about a guy is his smile and sense of humor."

-Betty Jacobs

"I look for girls who are funny, nice, and fun to talk to."

-James Lee

"The best quality in a boy at school is that they are academically smart, and they are also school spirited."

-Susan Lee

"I like guys that are intriguingly unique."

-Jessica Lee

"The best thing I like about girls are very big eyes that bulge out very far and are round."

-Breanden Hohnes

Being a freshmen, you long for someone to be with to help you survive the pennies and the teasing. It is only natural. Entering a high school brings many new opportunities to your door steps. Hopefully, one of those opportunities is the chance at something special.

Conversing with friends, members of the W.H.O. Club, discuss activities that they should hold with the Sojourner Truth School kids in the upcoming field trip.

Problems: Pimples, Money, Freshmen Year

That queasy feeling that you've had in the pit of your stomach since the day you arrived still lingers. From friends, to grades and even family problems, things just never turn right. "High school is supposed to be a time to let the world know who you really are, and the education was thought to be well educating and fun at the same time," replied freshman Julie Kim. Maybe that's how you used to look at it, but then again, that was before all your problems started piling up.

Many things can change in a year. These changes can range from excellent, to good, to just plain awful. Some student's tend to blow off their freshman year, thinking that they could make it up during their sophomore year. Thinking that blowing if off will make their year easier, these student's find out that things will just get harder and harder. Grades fall apart, friends give you headaches, and nothing is as simple as it was before. These are some of the changes that freshman have to learn to manage.

"Some of my friends have changed a lot since junior high, and now that high school started, they think they're ALL THAT. The part of high school I hate the most is the fact that most of the people that I've known the longest, and cared foe the most are now gone ..." replies freshman Sherryll Lapenia.

As tough as starting high school may be, keep striving for those goals in your life, and just remember ... freshmen don't stay freshmen forever! Everyone has problems, but bear with them and try to make the best of your freshmen year!

Nightmare On Oakton Street

One of the hardest things for incoming freshmen to endure are the horror stories told by upperclassmen; if it is not hard enough to go to a different school with totally new rules. Just last year you were on top of the world and now you are on the bottom of the totem pole. Now you hear scary stories of how you should keep an eye out for mean seniors freshmen year. Some freshmen feel that there is nothing to fear. Some feel that they are just myths to make upperclassmen feel more superior. And then there is the kind of freshman who goes through freshmen year scared to death about what is lurking around the corner.

Freshman Randy Plasenci has been told some really scary stories, he comments on one that sticks in his mind. He says, "When you are in the bathroom, they put you upside down and give you chocolate swirlies."

While freshman Haris Bilal recalls one of the most famous stories, "You get pennies thrown at you while hearing 'GO HOME FRESHMAN' chants through the halls."

Instead of an intimidating story, freshman Stanford Kim was given a word of advice, "Don't buy an elevator pass from a senior." (You can get one from a junior for $5 less.)

Whether it is fact or fiction, rumors, stories, and myths about high school will always be told to scare and threaten freshmen. An advice from two fellow freshmen, make friends with upperclassmen and always travel in the middle of a group. (Pennies almost never made it to the middle of a crowd.)

Lynde Hopper

Penny Pitchers

The sport of throwing pennies has been around as long as anyone can remember. Every year, the freshmen get pelted with pennies by all of the older students. One has to wonder: Why am I throwing pennies at freshmen? Why not rocks or something that would hurt a lot more than pennies? "Cause if they threw quarters, they'd lose a lot of money," explains junior Susan Persky. "Because that's all they are worth," states senior Mattia Nanfria.

There are people who hate wasting time getting change out of their pockets for the snack machines, but at least when they do that, you get something out of it like candy or pop.

So why throw anything at all? Who wants to waste any of their time or energy on the freshmen? "So they can feel good about themselves," replies freshman Melissa Levy. "It is human nature to pick on the weak!" exclaims junior Mark Nabong. "Because they got pennies thrown at them as freshmen," comments freshman Alinda Muzinski.

These replies seem to answer the questions for the most part, but no one will ever truly know the real reason that people pick on freshmen. So next time you are about to whip a penny or two at a freshman, you might want to ask yourself this question: Why am I bothering to waste even a small part of my life to tell a worthless freshman that I really do hate him/her?

Don't

FRESHMEN . . . there. You have been fairly represented so don't stray to the contrary. It is kind of strange to write a story about a unit of people that you never seem to see . . . or notice. So shall we try to bring them into the light? I think not.

We've decided to spend this page's character on native high schooler's perspectives (allowing, of course, the element of expression while not altering our most primitive subject-freshmen). Sounds like an English paper? Just earning my 1/2 credit. Since the seniors are leaving first and do have the peak of the student body's hierarchy, it's fair to represent them first. Karen Malina (full time senior/ part time student) ventures out of the darkness to say, "This year the freshmen think that they're seniors and that makes me mad. They're too cocky." Let's go back though for a minute. We are all familiar with the misguided attitude that freshmen acquire from the eighth grade that says to them, "Hey, I'm kind of cool", while it translates to the rest of us, "Hey, I'm a dork." Some may think this as a harsh overstatement but don't you remember how dorky you felt by the end of your sophomore year looking back? Finally realizing that your cool image as a ninth grader was just a bitter-sweet facade? Traumatizing, isn't it? If you are asking yourself what that last word meant, and you know who you are (freshmen), look it up and impress an English teacher with it in the future. Of course indeed I am making them out as a lot slower than they really are, but it's fun. Just playing my part in the high school role as the provocative writer. A more accurate look at freshmen, ironically, is the one taken through the obtrusive perspective.

Face it, after sophomore year you just don't recognize any of them and by junior year you notice them only because they always seem to walk into your English class a mod early (for the first whole week). When you're a senior, unknowingly you mistake the freshmen for "those kids that came to watch that play in the morning". "I only notice them because my brother's a freshman and he's got obnoxious friends," remarked junior Susan Persky. By now the freshmen reading this will be considered sophomores anyway, so don't let this ruin your life (as I'm sure it has had that profound effect on you).

Teacher's Funny Mishaps

Don't think teachers have weird or funny things happen to them. Well, it turns out that they do and they are weird.

Some weird things happen to teachers in the classroom. For example, English teacher William Geismann said, "Every day I would peel a banana exactly at 11:15. One day I took out my banana and started peeling it. Well, when I looked up, everyone in the classroom was eating a banana too!"

You never think of excuses as being weird or funny. Well neither did Science teacher Ami LeFevre. She said that the weirdest excuse she had ever heard from a student was, "A dog ate my homework. The student even showed me the paw marks and the teeth marks. I could not believe it was actually true!"

Not only do weird things happen in school, but they happen out of school. For instance, History teacher David Brandes said, "The weirdest thing that happened to me, was one day my friend told me that my mother's friend died. (She had read it in the obituaries.) Well, at first she had thought that the funeral was yesterday. At the last moment she called me up and said that the funeral was actually today in ten minutes. I rushed over there, (late of course), so I did not get to see the person's face in the casket. Well, I was wondering why they kept calling the person the wrong name and why I didn't recognize anyone. It turned out that I had gone to the wrong person's funeral and that my friend given me the wrong information!"

In conclusion, weird and funny things do happen to teachers. If this is what happens to teachers imagine what happens to students. They are probably twice as weird.

Teacher's Favorite Classes

A long while ago, though hard to believe, our teachers sat in classrooms much like the students of today. They watched as their teachers relayed information, either boring or exciting, to them. Some of these teachers stood apart from the rest. They made these students want to learn and inquire about their subjects. Some of these teachers made their field of expertise so exciting that their students went on to pursue a deeper knowledge of that subject area themselves.

When asked what his favorite class was, English teacher Marvin Klebba replied, "My favorite class in high school was biology. I guess it was because we didn't just sit, think, read, and write — we actually got to cut things up, look through microscopes, and swivel around on the lab stools."

Math teacher Jerry Smith enjoyed chemistry, "Because we got to do lots of labs. Once, I nearly destroyed my lab partner's hands when an acid generator almost blew up."

When talking to science teacher Ami LeFevre, she replied, "Human anatomy and physiology were my favorites because I'm interested in the body systems within the human."

Not surprisingly, history teacher Joe Meyer said, "History (was my favorite) because I always enjoyed it — it was like a story."

Spanish teacher Steve Beavers still loves German literature because, "We had many discussions, and we got to read Schiller, Goethe and the German romantic poets. Also, the teacher was very knowledgeable — it was just fun."

Another Spanish teacher, Elizabeth Robertson, said that she liked a Spanish linguistics class because, "The instructor was a woman who was very knowledgeable, warm, and she made it very easy to understand."

In high school, Bob Murphy took a science class that he really enjoyed. He said that his favorite class, "Would have to be my sophomore biology class because (the teacher) was well-prepared and organized. Also, it was the first time I had to do any work in a class — he forced me to become a student. This helped me to understand how much I could learn if I really applied myself."

Obviously, throughout their schooling, many of today's teachers had interesting teachers and classes. These classes helped them to understand more at the time and in some cases became something worth studying in the future. Today, just like back then, students still have favorite classes. Some of these teachers are an influential part in students' decisions to become teachers. Both the subjects and the teachers help to make classes interesting and well worth teaching.

A New Look

As the school year began, a new staff of teachers swept in through the doorway to introduce the students to new ideas and new thoughts. Niles West acquired twenty-five new teachers who arrived with high hopes of helping the students in need. From helping these students, they received a respect from the student body ten times as strong as the effort they gave out. Instead of the old chain that only teachers teach students, a web has been connected between the staff, parents, and student body.

The bond within the school vibrates throughout the building, affecting everyone that comes. English teacher Blake Magnason stated, "I wanted to become a teacher at Niles West because I was impressed by the staff and the students." I guess that we are not as bad as we thought we were.

Of course, opportunities like a job at Niles West only comes once in a lifetime. Physical Education teacher Steve Ramseyer, ex-security guard, has always wanted to be a teacher. "When I got out of college, I wanted to become a physical education teacher. Because I graduated from Niles West, I came back hoping for a teaching job, but there were no openings. I became a security guard until an opening opened up in physical education."

Even if the students will not admit it, the teachers do play a significant role in their lives. History teacher Scott Ackman commented, "I wanted to help students both inside and outside the classroom."

Next year, these twenty-five new teachers will have a whole year of experience with the student body of Niles West. Let's just hope that we do not scare them away. I kinda like them. Kinda.

Taste Of The Teachers

Throughout our lives we look at our teacher as objects, not as real people. We don't consider them to have outside interests. It's believed the only reason they exist is to help us learn. However, I have discovered the truth. They are really just like us. They have families, interests, etc.

Most surprisingly of all, they have taste in music. I know, pretty shocking, right? What kind of music do teachers listen to? Do they listen to the same kind of music you do? Do they listen to the same kind of music your parents listen to? Our wild English teacher, Dennis Duffy who has a little gold hoop earring in his left ear, is interested in classical music and chants. Michele Lewis, one of the new additions to our teaching staff at Niles West enjoys colorful music. Her favorite bands are R.E.M. and the Pretenders.

She also adores Sting. Sarell Hesser says the kind of music she listens to depends on her mood. When she has had a hectic day she listens to easy listening. However, when she has had a good day she likes to listen to the popular jams. Steven Beaver listens to progressive, alternative rock, traditional folk, country music, and early jazz. His favorite artists are George Jones, John Prine, and Al Fitzgerald.

In conclusion, teachers are almost like us, at least when it comes to music. From now on you can look at them as real people not just as teachers. Finally, the truth has been told about teachers.

Sophomore Christina Moen receives some advice on her paper from English teacher Dana Des Jardins and student teacher Judith Hill. The writing center, relatively new, gives students a chance to get input on various writing assignments.

Why Teach?

People become teachers so they can teach all that they know. They also must love grading papers all weekend, dealing with unruly students, and listening to creative excuses for not having homework. Undoubtedly they enjoy teaching because of the two weeks off for winter break, a week off in spring, and three months off in the summer. Many teachers agree with these reasons but claim the number one reason they enjoy teaching is working with kids.

For example, Spanish teacher Elizabeth Robertson said, "I like to work with kids. It is a very gratifying job." Home Economics teacher Wilda DeFur answered, "(I enjoy) interacting with my students, who usually are enthusiastic and want to learn." Some teachers just love everything about teaching, like Carol Simone, who teaches People and their Cultures. "I love everything, except grading papers on Sunday nights. Every class and every year is new. Each year I think I'm going to get it right."

So, while many think that teachers are just waiting for their vacations to come, it is because of the students that they are here in the first place. These students enable them to share valuable knowledge, which in turn allows students to learn and grow.

Athletic Director Gerald Turry welcomes Coach Steve Ramseyer to the teaching staff during Teacher Institute Day on August 26, 1994. This former Niles West student was enthusiastically welcomed to the Niles West teaching staff.

Sophomore flute players Andrew Sniezek and Ji Cho play their instruments in beginning band class. Beginner band offers students who did not play an instrument in junior high a chance to start their musical career.

Sounding Off

Practicing long hours for four half-hour-long performances, the music department musicians work with determination and dedication to show the audience their best sounds. The music staff includes the new choral director Paula Bachman, orchestra director Steven Katz, band director William Koch, and a whole group of private teachers that support the students through thick and thin.

Many students started their musical career at a very tender age. Band member Alex Padiernos stated, "I started playing in fourth grade because it was fun then. It's getting boring now because I have to practice." Competition appears throughout the department for solos, first chairs, and self-evaluation. Koch once commented that the music department consists of the most disciplined students of Niles West.

There has always been a regret throughout the department about the grading scale. Many feel that a pass or fail grade brings down the excellent level of achievement that they represent. "There's really nothing to dislike about chorus, I guess. It's a pass/fail grade, so you just kinda slide through," said junior Jenni Wielgus.

Some students have not heard beautiful music coming out of their voice or instrument yet; but when they do, they will never want to give up music. Music will become part of their soul, and they will never forget the performances, musicals, field trips, competitions, tours, and, yes, even practice.

Freshman students from Choraliers practice their sight-reading abilities by singing from the Melodias books. If one was to try out for a professional singing job, one is required to have strong sightreading skills.

Alfred Tsao and Mike Wills cut out the faces of pumpkins for Halloween. Many students enjoy art class because it gives them a chance to show their creative side while also helping them to design different pictures and projects.

Senior Berny Khoury works on his math homework in the Guidance Resource Center. The Guidance Resource Center is also a great source for students to learn all about the college that they want to attend.

Daniel Robert Szymanski has fun in the playhouse. Parents often bring their children to Niles West where students (from Niles West) get to take care of and play with the children.

Children Develop Popular Course

One of the most popular classes offered is the child care course. Two levels of the class exist. First year students take Child Development/Nursery School. They learn about the development of a child. Second year students take Child Development Workshop and concentrate on the administrative and management aspects of a nursery school. The two classes allow students the opportunity to gain first-hand experience working with young children. They also provide a nursery school for children in the area.

The fifty-five minute classes, taught by Ms. Wilda DeFur, combine classroom learning with hands-on experience. Students spend three days a week learning through standard classroom and textbook methods. The remaining two days, Tuesday and Thursday, are spent working with the children in the laboratory nursery. A fresh group of twelve children replace the original twelve in the afternoon. The children range in age from three to four and a half years old.

Sophomore Jenny Lau takes the first year course. "I love working with the kids. The class really gives you a sense of what it is like to work with a large group of children."

This class, and others of its type, give students the opportunity to combine typical classroom study with hands-on experience, which can help prepare them for the future.

-Heidi Eichler

A student uses the phone to make a phone call. During their free time, many students use the phone to make personal calls to their house or their friends.

Junior Jamie Zimmerman poses for a picture with a girl that she is taking care of. In search of learning how to take care of children, many students take Child Development.

Piglet, junior Marsha Suzara, offers to go with Pooh to get balloons from Christopher Robin. Piglet follows Pooh around faithfully throughout the entire play.

It Takes A Crew

Every couple of months, the auditorium turns into a whole other world. Sometimes it takes you back in time, sometimes in a fantasy and sometimes right in the middle of a cartoon. Who do we thank for this, you might ask? The Niles West Theatre Department is in charge of these magical trips.

There are four productions every school year. The fall play (Dracula this year) is directed by Mr. Batts; the Children's Theatre (Winnie the Pooh) is directed by Ms. Phylbin; the musical (Chicago) is directed by Mr. Johnson and the Pow Wow or student produced play (You're a Good Man, Charlie Brown) is directed by a new pair of students every year.

The one thing everyone thinks of when someone mentions theatre is acting, of course. In most situations, the actors get paid, but in high school theatre this is not the case. So one has to wonder, "Why go up there in front of a bunch of people you don't know for two hours, acting like you usually do not?"

"It made me feel alive." Karina Kramer-Schievers

"I enjoy entertaining people." Jenny Bergstrom

"I think it is fun." Matt Joseph

The one thing that never gets mentioned or usually even thought of is back stage crew. The lighting, the sound, and the special effects make the plays what they are. The shows would not even run if there was no crew. While the actors are acting on stage, the crew is working extremely hard to make the show come alive. During the actual performances, the crew does a lot more work than the actors to keep the show running. But just like the actors, the crew does not get paid. So why bother?

"I enjoy seeing the results of my hard work."

Marsha Fowler

"Crew is a family, I like everyone that is here." Eric Bergstrom

"I love to hear people tell me how great it looks." Jenni Siegel

So the next time you go to a play at school, you might want to take the time to appreciate what you are seeing (both on and off stage) and remember that it takes a lot of time and skill to put a play together.

Freshman Garrett Pautsch concentrates on finishing the reading assignment given in class. Teachers often allow time in class for students to begin reading.

Students work on finishing their assignments for keyboarding class. This is one way for students to develop their computer skills and learn more about computer language.

Mmm, Mmm, Good!

Chef's course is a class that prepares students for the real world because it teaches them to cook for themselves. This class is based on learning how to prepare different kinds of foods. The class spends two days a week in the classroom and three days a week cooking in a cooking lab. The reason the students spend more time cooking is because Ms. Oldham believes that they will learn more if they try it themselves. This class is a great way for students to develop their cooking skills and in that way to become more independent.

Some students find this class very helpful. For example, Marlene Odeesh said, "I like this class because I am learning how to cook."

Unlike Marlene, Robin Potter stated, "This class is a drag. The only good thing about it is the cooking."

Other students say they would rather cook more often. For instance, "I think it is O.K., but I would rather cook more." said Hajlije Dragovic.

In conclusion, Chef's Course is a great way to experiment with cooking and how it can help you. Not only does it help prepare students in that big step to become great chefs, but it helps student to take that big step in making themselves obtain greater knowledge about food and cooking itself.

In the library, students work to finish their assignments for their classes. Not only is the library a useful resource, but it also offers job information, background on certain countries, and computers to assist students.

During cooking class home economics teacher Elizabeth Oldham helps out sophomore Anna Koinis. Many elective classes such as Chef's Course help to teach students how to satisfy some of the basic needs of life.

A student sits in the Oakton Lobby, working on his homework. The Oakton Lobby is also used for Market Day pick-ups, College Night, test taking, and art exhibits.

Senior Robert Hryniewicki and Junior Dan Ruzicka discuss the game while at their locker. Students often decorate their lockers during Homecoming, Halloween, Christmas, Valentine's Day, and Prom.

In cooking class, junior Jane Froman makes a specialty dish. Cooking class is one of the many courses offered to students that they can use later in life.

Junior Kim Minx puts the finishing touches on a client. Cosmetology class involves working on real-live people and is a great way for students to learn how to style hair and manicure nails.

Students Put Hands On Beauty

Has your dream always been to learn how to fix hair and manicure nails? Well, there is a class that is offered five days a week, and four hours a day. It is called cosmetology class. In this class not only do you go five days a week, but you get hands-on work four out of the five days.

Each Monday that you are not doing hands-on work is a theory day. On this day, the class involves doing book work and taking a test. To make this class even more fun and unique, the students go once a month on Saturday for an eight hour hands-on blowout. On top of everything that is great about this class, you get to leave school every day at 1:30.

Students love being able to learn how to style hair and manicure nails. For example, Kim Minx, a member of the cosmetology class said, "Cosmetology is fun yet exciting. I love it!"

This is so exciting for Kim that she stated,

"I can't wait till we get out of basic where I can actually take real customers."

Not only does Kim feel that cosmetology is a challenging class, but she also feels that this will be useful in the future. She stated, "Mostly everything is 'hands on'. Sometimes we watch it on videos or by watching our teacher, but then we go and work on our mannequins."

Kim has also learned many interesting facts about their hair and nails. For example, she said, "Did you know that your middle finger nail grows faster than all of your other nails and that your thumb grows slower?"

Cosmetology is a fun and extremely practical course. Not only do you get to work on hair and nails, but you earn knowledge that can be directly applied to a career in a salon or boutique.

Lisa Acker

Kim Minx practices styling hair by using a mannequin. Before cosmetology students work on real-live people they use mannequins.

Students get ready to begin chemistry class. Often when a teacher is not present, students prepare for classwork and converse with their friends.

Students work diligently on their projects for art class. In art classes, many students create objects like pottery and perspective-point pictures that reveal creative talents they never knew they possessed.

Running to the back of the room, scared students stare into space. Often in study halls students twiddle their thumbs or try to do algebra with their toes.

In mid-action, senior David Mitria narrows in on the pitcher. Coach Gustafson is in charge of the boys varsity baseball team.

A short break from running, such as getting your picture taken, puts fun into long hours of practicing. Athletes are perhaps the most dedicated people because of their determination to win and have fun while doing it.

Junior George Rhee and senior Matt Sheahan give goofy grins for the camera. Rhee and Sheahan are both starters for the varsity football team.

Varsity swimmer Lauren Costa quietly watches warm-ups before the away swim meet against Maine East. Swimming and any other sports require a lot of energy from both your physical body and also your mental readiness.

GIRLS SOCCER

Number of players: 19

Best thing about this sport: We had good leadership from co-captains Nadine Buczak and Adia Keegstra. We also had great team spirit.

Season accomplishments: We took third place in the Highland Park tournament.. We built up a strong team for next year with 7 returning starters.

Quote from coach: "I was really pleased that the players took charge of the game by themselves, communicated with each other, and encouraged each other." - Coach Brennan

Quote from a team member: "We had a young team this year, but we also had extremely talented players. We work well together and hope to build a prosperous team for years to come" - Kira Keegstra.

Sophomore Rebecca Robertson power kicks the ball to the other side of the field. Robertson was one of the couple sophomores who played for varsity.

Sophomore Sandy Park controls the ball as she aims in direction of the goal hoping to score. Mental determination, in addition to physical ability, are key necessities for scoring goals and gaining leads.

Senior Kristen Ichista struggles to take the ball away from the opposing team. Ichista has played for the soccer team during her junior and senior years.

Sophomore Savitre Tubrung plays hard as she attempts to steal the ball away from her opponents. Stealing is important so that you have a better chance of making goals.

GIRLS SOFTBALL

Number of players: 14

Best thing about this sport: Softball is a sport that is truly a national pastime. All the players are working toward one common goal and are enjoying the comradery of fellow teammates and opponents.

Seasons Accomplishments: 6 and 11 overall. 3 and 7 in conference.

Quote from the coach: "This is a team that will stay with me forever. Despite a losing record, they displayed true effort and dedication to the team and myself. All five seniors are true representatives of sportsmanship." - Coach Slickas

Quote from player: "From the beginning of the season till the end the team really came a long way and gelled together as one." - Christina Gabler

Pitching the ball to the catcher, sophomore Maris Grossman warms up before a game. In order to be able to play in a game, softball players must be at all practices at all times.

With a look of concentration on her face, coach Paula Slickas looks at how her team is playing. Good coaching is also an important part in having a successful season.

Stacy Boldt catches the throw down to second. The varsity team's record was three and five in conference.

Sophomore Linda Khoshaba waits for the pitcher's release. Base runners must wait until the pitcher releases the ball to make their move.

Pitching a fast ball, freshman Kim Richards gets warmed up to pitch before her game. Softball players must be in good physical shape to be successful during their season.

Watching a game, freshmen softball players get ready to go home after their game. Being part of the softball team takes a lot of strength and courage.

Pitcher Jennifer Berkowitz delivers a strike. To do the best that they could, the varsity team practiced their skills everyday after school.

Varsity's sophomore star pitcher Jenni Wielgus pitches a fast ball. A good pitcher learns to throw different types of pitches such as the change-up, fast ball, and raise ball.

Sophomore Joanne Lee finishes jumping over a hurdle during a meet. Hurdlers must have correct position in jumping over hurdles to keep from slowing down.

GIRLS TRACK

Number of players:65

Best thing about this sport:Enables a student to develop physical fitness and compete in every meet.

Season Accomplishments:

5th place in CSL, 1st place in Maine South Invitational, 1st place in Prospect Invitational, State qualifier Sophia Sakellariou.

Quote from coach:Coaching track and field has enabled me to meet and work with so many enthusiastic and dedicated girls. 90% of track seniors are scholar athletes.- Jean Armour.

Quote from team member:Since the new conference was more of a challenge we started the season by capturing victories at the invitionals. But when it came down to the CSL meet, we set more personal goals and strived to achieve them. Although we went in as conference champs and finished 5th we're still champs.- Jamenda Moss

Junior Cathleen Pawlowski soars through the air as she tries to jump her farthest distance. The members not only try to do their best for the team, but they try for their personal best as well.

A member of the track team hurls the shot put through the air during a meet. Shot put is one of the many field events in track and field.

Sophomores Susan Koo, Joanne Lee, junior Seong Park, and freshman Cathy Malewicka pose for a picture with coach Armour after just placing first in the hurdle relay. The track team did well during the season, and even made it all the way to state finals.

Having a blast at the state track meet, senior Sophia Sakellariou, junior Seong Park, junior Cathleen Pawlowski, sophomore Cheryl Gesiani and freshman Ticha Maleegrai wait for Sakellariou's turn to run. Being able to relax before competing helps the runner to do his best.

With remarkable speed, junior Jamenda Moss passes the baton to fellow junior and teammate Cathleen Pawlowski. Moss was one of the 2 people chosen to be one of the co-captains for next year's team.

GIRLS CROSS COUNTRY

Number of players: 40- Everyone can participate.

Best thing about this sport: No one gets cut. Everyone can improve and everyone gets to run in most of the meets. Very close group - great friends and wonderful exercise.

Seasons Accomplishments: Only lost to 2 teams in dual meet competitions. Christi Policht was All - Conference. We have a young team with lots of potential.

Quote from coach: "Cross country runners are some of the most dedicated and hard working athletes I've ever coached. This team also had the highest percentage of scholar athletes."

- Coach Sloan

Quote from a team member: "Cross country has the most comradery out of any other sport I've participated in. It's like a big family" - Anne Czupryna Breathing hard, sophomore Christie Policht races ahead of everyone else during a meet. Having great speed and agility. Policht has easily become one of varsity's top runners.

Beating out the other runners, senior Su Jin Hwang runs hard to finish with the top runners. Great stamina is needed for such an enduring sport as cross country.

Cross Country Runners smile for the camera. As a result of training with each other for hours after school, close friendships, like these, are formed.

Sophomore Amy Ginsburg runs with great speed ahead of her opponent. Ginsburg, who ran cross country for the first time this year, had an outstanding season on varsity.

Cross Country runners warm up with a paced job. Members of the team run up to five miles a day to build up endurance for their races.

With her best side in the air, (just kidding), sophomore Amy Ginsburg stretches during practice. Stretching before and after running is important as not to pull or strain any muscles.

Sophomore Marsha Slobodnik struggles to finish her race. To do their best, runners must learn to monitor their breathing and pace themselves.

Junior Katie Hedrick checks the list to see what events she will be swimming. The shortest race is the 50, which is two laps, and the longest is 500, which is twenty laps.

Despite a cold which prevents her from swimming, sophomore Terri Gawron cheers on her teammates. Team unity was stressed by the coaches.

A Niles West swimmer warms up by doing freestyle laps. Swimmers also practice jumps and turns during practice.

Junior Gina Ferentz waits on the deck for her next race. Ferentz specialized in freestyle races.

Freshmen Erin Pollyea and Olga Lyandres relax before a meet. The swim team has no cuts, which makes it open to everyone.

Members of the swim team prepare to jump off the starting block. A good start is crucial to winning a race.

Junior varsity coach Joyce Van Alstin gives freshman Heather Lipner a pep talk. Ms. Van Alstin has been a coach of the swim team for many years.

GIRL'S SWIMMING

Number of players: 75 swimmers

Best thing about this sport: The energy, support of each other, and friendships developed on the team were important elements of the 94 season. The focus on swimming your best and working to "beat the clock" and "your time" were central to a swimmers goal.

Seasons accomplishments: Large team who showed solidarity and support throughout a long season (Aug. - Nov.). They worked extremely hard on personal swimming goals.

Quote from coach: "This year was filled with wonderful parental support, and team members realized the power to excel in each of them. It's a combination of attitude, desire, and commitment to excellence."
- Coach Kracht

Quote from a team member: "This year our team has come together and has strengthened our team. The addition of Coach Kracht has made us better swimmers and achievers. I can't wait for next year to come!"
- Jenny Bonner

Sophomore Simone Kung smiles for the camera one day after practice. Kung's tennis abilities are so great that she was ranked fifth in the state of Illinois.

Sophomore Niki Mollet bumps the ball over to the other side during warm-ups before a game. Warming up properly before a game helps avoid sprains and injuries.

GIRLS VOLLEYBALL

Number of players: 10

Best thing about this sport: Volleyball can't be won without all members of the team contributing something, and it's a very exciting sport to watch. The volleyball team at NW is getting better with each year.

Seasons Accomplishments: Double digits in the win column, competed in the 2nd place pool in both tournaments defeating Niles North. It's the best team NW has seen in many years. Also, Regional Final Participant.

Quote from coach: "As I finished my second year coaching the varsity, I feel the overall play has improved. We are starting to gain some respect through this better play. I look forward to the program continuing to improve and to put some banners up in the gymnasium."
- Coach Sinnick

Quote from team member: "Our team this year was really something special. It wasn't just about playing, but also about unity, togetherness, and special friendships" - Audrey Suh

The junior varsity team gets ready to receive a serve from the other team. Besides being able to receive hits, players must be skillful in bumping, setting, spiking, and serving.

Senior Audrey Suh puts up the ball from down low for an easy basket. Great height like Suh's is an essential part in being a good center.

Sophomore Amy Ginsburg goes in for the jump shot in a home game against Deerfield. Ginsburg is one of only two sophomores that plays for varsity.

GIRLS BASKETBALL

NUMBER OF PLAYERS: 12

BEST THING ABOUT THIS SPORT:

Team unity of having 12 players together for a common goal.

SEASONS ACCOMPLISHMENTS: Every game that Niles West girls varsity played in, they played as hard as they could and left nothing behind them.

QUOTE FROM COACH: "I enjoyed coaching these 12 individuals and I will miss seven wonderful seniors that have participated in our program in the last 4 years. They are Amy Alexander, Stacy Boldt, Anne Czupryna, Christina Gabler, Jenny Matik, Kristine Mueller, and Audrey Suh.

QUOTE FROM TEAM MEMBER: "This year we have finally achieved something that has taken us four years: team unity."

Putting the final touches in her beam routine, Lisa Milosavljevic shows pride in her work. Although only a freshman, Lisa is an important addition to the varsity team.

The freshmen boys "A" team contemplates a strategy for the upcoming baseball game. The boys practice long hours perfecting their skills and building team morale.

BOYS BASEBALL

Number of players: 21

Best thing about this sport: The team always showed a winning attitude and played hard throughout the season.

Season Accomplishments: Ranked 21st in pre-season by Chicago Sun-Times, went 19-11, and took 2nd place in the Central Suburban League South.

Quote from coach: "I felt the team played good, hard baseball, and continued to do that throughout the spring and summer. All their hard work and dedication paid off during a very successful season." - Coach Gustafson

Quote from player: I think the team had far more success than the season showed. I think many players found their true potential and it will help them in college. The team worked much better together than they did the year before." - Jeremy Niedermaier

Sophomore Brett McGovern beats out an infield single ahead of the throw to first base. McGovern's speed was vital in getting a base hit.

Freshman Peter Sikaras gets ready to hit the ball. A good stance is essential to hitting the ball well.

Senior Kevin Ratliff smudges eye-black under senior Rick Lochner's eyes. The eye-black prevents the sun's reflection from impairing vision on a bright spring day.

BOYS GYMNASTICS

Number of players: 27

Best thing about this sport: It's unique challenges bring out the best in people. Weaknesses are exposed and conquered. Strengths are brought to the surface to make a confident individual.

Season Accomplishments: Two state competitions, four all-conference athletes, three scholar-athletes, one Pioneer Press Gymnast of the Week.

Quote from the coach: "This is probably the most cohesive team I have ever coached. They show tremendous tenacity and heart. It is a pleasure to work with such a confident and hard-working crew." - Coach Foerch

Quote from a team member: "Our team this year was a group of tough, innovative, and talented athletes." - Adrian Batista, Captain

Junior Matt Javanshad performs a back lever as a part of his routine. Gymnastics requires a lot of grace and dedication.

Freshman Joe Oh practices his routine on the high bar. Gymnasts must concentrate on their moves so as to avoid injury.

Showing junior Alex Shteyn support, fellow junior Keith Mukai gives him ten. Team spirit and support is important in winning a meet.

With a look of determination on his face, senior Quinn Wherfel does an 'L' on the rings. Wherfel has been a member of the boys gymnastics team for all of his four years at Niles West.

Saluting the judges, Junior Keith Mukai concentrates on his performance. There are many aspects of boys gymnastics, including floor, rings, vault, parallel bars, and pommel horse.

With strength and determination, freshman Matt Smith performs on the pommel horse, one of the hardest events in boys gymnastics. The team practiced everyday for two hours to build strength and fine-tune their routines.

Chalking up for the parallel bars, freshman Chris Torres tries to have some fun and relax before his turn to compete. Torres was one of the top scorers of the freshmen gymnastics team.

Junior Keith Mukai performs a routine on the rings during a gymnastics meet. Gymnasts practice after school to improve their technique and performance.

Senior Adrian Batista performs a backflip on the floor exercise. Batista became one of the top performing gymnasts at Niles West by devoting great time and effort.

Two track members finish up their required laps for the day's practice. Track members either practice outside, inside, or in the weight room.

Track members practice running in front of the school after school. Runners must be physically fit in order to do well.

GUYS TRACK

Number of players: 45

Seasons Accomplishments:

The indoor record was 4-6, they were 9-12 at the Maine East Invitational, and they were sixth in the CSL. The outdoor record 6-3, they were 7-12 at Don, 14-19 Nalley, 2-9 at Gans, sixth at CSL, 13-17 at sectionals, and they finished the season 10-9.

Best thing about this sport:

The best thing about track and field is that there are so many options. People have their choices of field events, such as shot put, long jump, high jump, discus, and javelin. They also have the choice of all the running events.

Track coach Mr. Campbell poses for the camera after one of his practices. Good coaching, like Campbell's, is necessary in having a successful team.

Members of the track team run laps outside in the field one day after school. Having enough stamina is important in being able to finish a race.

BOYS VOLLEYBALL

Number of players: 12

Best thing about this sport: It's very fast, making this sport extremely exciting to watch. Volleyball has been becoming increasingly popular from the beach to the olympics.

Season Accomplishments:

Defeated top 5 team Loyola Academy
Defeated top 10 team Glenbrook South.

Quote from coach: "This team never gave up or stopped trying to be better as a team or as individuals. Everyone wants to play which makes it inspiring for me to coach." - Coach Sinnick.

Quote from team member: This year was the best year by far. We worked together and won together. I look forward and see us at state finals.
-Steve Neumeyer.

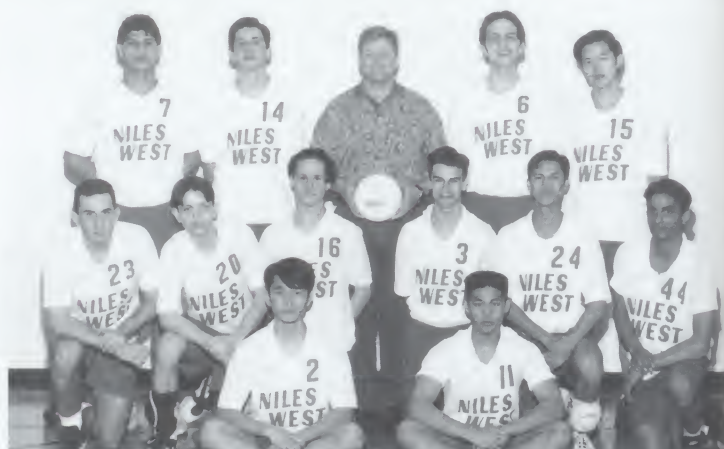

Freshman Gabriel Cho serves to the opponent. The Freshman B volleyball team was first in their conference.

The varsity volleyball team looks on as New Trier tries to return their serve. The varsity team concluded the regular season with an 11-17 overall mark and 2-8 in the CSL south division.

A pack of Niles West varsity runners begin a race alongside other schools. This meet was held at Lincoln Park in Chicago.

Juniors James Ahn, Sean King, and seniors Mark Pasignajen and Sang Kim run together at a home meet. Running with teammates is an asset so they can pace each other.

Ahead of other runners, senior Josh Byer, paces himself from start to finish. Long distance runners must conserve their energy in order to win a meet.

Sophomores Brian Varghese, Justin Loeffler, and Freshmen Cecil Mahoney and Garret Pautsch stay on the trail of other competitors at a local meet. This is both Loeffler's and Varghese's second year on the team.

Senior Mark Pasignajen is leading in front of a pack of runners at a recent cross country meet. Cross country requires agility, lower body strength, and high energy. Pasignajen participated on the varsity team, which had a record of 15 and 5.

Sophomore Eddie Ayala turns a corner at a local cross country meet. This was Ayala's first year running for the team.

BOYS CROSS COUNTRY

Number of players: 40

Best thing about this sport: This is an activity that you can do for the rest of your life. Running will help you to live better and to live longer. The discipline of the long distance runner carries over into all activities that require tenancy, scholarship, and endurance.

Seasons Accomplishments: Won 7 team trophies, all 3 levels had winning records in dual meets, 24th annual Indian Cross Country Invitational is the largest XC meet in the USA, and Josh Byer qualified for the IHSA sectional championships.

Quote from coach: "This was one of the nicest groups of athletes that I have coached at Niles West. I am very proud of all of them as I look forward to all of them making running a part of their everyday lives throughout their lifetimes"
-Coach Savage

Quote from a team member: "I don't run to set records. I run because I like to run and I know that running is something I will be able to be good at the rest of my life. I live to run and run to live" - Anonymous

Number of players:42

Best thing about this sport: In the sport of football, more than any other sport, you have to not only do your job, but depend on your teammates to do theirs in order to accomplish anything. That dependency causes the guys on the team to become really close. Ron Friedman

Season Accomplishments:We were very competitive regardless of our record. Our team was explosive on offense and moved the football up and down the field against some outstanding teams. The team had over 2,000 yards of offense this year. The two things that hurt our season was inexperience and too many turnovers. The highlight of our season was beating Niles North.

Quote from coach:" We had a tough schedule this year by playing 5 state playoff teams. Our kids played them tough and never gave up." -Coach Bill Richardson.

Quote from team member:"Our season was undoubtedly a success, because the hard work has produced some memories we will never forget. Despite our record we had an extremely talented team." -Ron Friedman.

Junior Rich Hoffman practices his swing before he takes his shot. The golf team has a bus waiting for them every day after school to take them to and from practice.

Senior Mark Schmidt follows through on his golf swing. Schmidt was the captain of this year's golf team.

GOLF

Number of players: 27

Best thing about this sport: This is a lifetime sport. You can participate in this sport for life.

Seasons Accomplishments: Niles West came in fifth place in the regionals.

Quote from the coach: "This was an interesting year. We had more players try out this year than in the last five years. We had two girls try out for the boys team. They competed along with the boys. They did a fine job. Courtney Krell advanced to the Girl's Sectionals."
- Coach Galla

Junior Rich Hoffman lines his shot up straight at the flag. Hitting the ball straight is very important to get a good score.

Scrambling to get open, varsity basketball players go one on one against a tough Deerfield defense. Deerfield beat Niles West 46 to 72 in their fifth game of the season.

Swisssh!! Junior Steve Brown puts up a shot during warm ups. Players usually warm up and practice shots. Before the game starts, warm ups are sometimes accompanied by music.

Sophomore Andreas Alvear tries to dribble the ball past his opponent in order to score some points for varsity. Alvear was one of only two sophomores who played for varsity.

While taking his shot, sophomore Rob "Wildman" Altman tackles a defender. This is Altman's second year playing basketball, Deerfield beat West in our fourth game of the season.

As a Notre Dame goalie defends his goal, Hajkalok from North prepares to take a shot. To be successful in scoring speed and proper technique is required.

Players from both teams scramble to gain possession of the puck during an away game. Speed, quickness and position are key skills in winning a hockey game.

Sophomore Nick Chin from West takes a slap shot from the front left hand corner of the goal. Chin was successful in making his shot.

Players from both the Niles and Notre Dame hockey teams congratulate each other after a tough hockey match. The Niles Hockey team consists of players from Niles West and North.

Niles hockey players gather to their side before the start of a game held at the Skokie Skatium. In many sports players give each other pep talks to get hyped up before the game.

Senior Kevin Meehan races to gain control of the puck during a recent game. Great speed and agility is required to beat other players in the game of hockey.

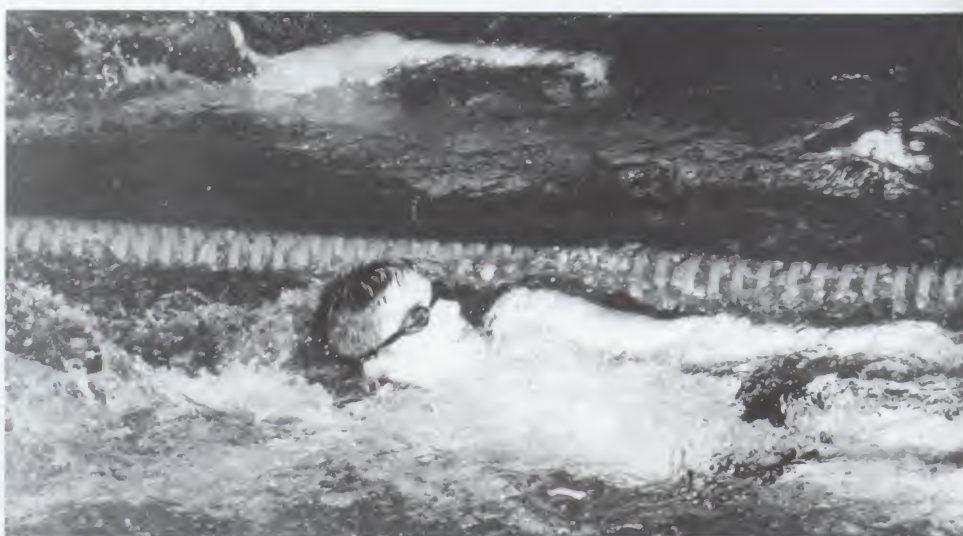

Both teams wait patiently but attentively for the referee to restart the game. A faceoff is necessary when a foul is committed by either team.

Sophomore Andy Strauch takes his time to recover the puck. In this situation the goalie usually stays in his position and lets his teammates go for the puck.

Sophomore Gary Ramirez does a reverse pike during practice. Divers as well as swimmers practice in the morning and after school.

Sophomore Derek Faulstik practices his backstroke before the start of a home meet. Swimmers swim many lengths to build up speed and endurance.

Planning out the half time routine with sophomore Paula Pisani, fellow sophomore and captain Andrea Braovac tries to see what will and what won't work for their routine. Cheerleaders perform a halftime show to entertain the crowd between halves.

Pommers Katie McDonald, Nikki Pasia, Christine Maghopoy, and Nikki Tottas jump for joy as they watch the homecoming game. This year, the pommers went to Sea World for Nationals and placed in the top 25%.

Jogging to their formation, the pom pon squad does a half time show for the homecoming game. For this game the pommers took a break from the usual skirts to a comfortable short and shirt look.

Sophomore Evelyn Rice keeps her arms stiff while doing her half time routine. Stiffness and flexibility are important skills a pommer needs to execute a perfect routine.

Keeping a straight line, the pommers do their dance for Pack the Place. Pommers have a choice whether or not to cheer for both the basketball and/or football season.

The pommers get together to form a kick line during a pep assembly. Dance skills are important fundamentals in pomming.

Pommers wave to the people as they go by in the homecoming parade. The homecoming parade helps set the mood for the upcoming football game.

Sophomore Christine Maghopoy smiles for the crowd while doing her pom half time show. Pommers spend many hours practicing after school in the cafe to perfect their dances for games and competitions.

German Club sponsor Dawn Jacobs discusses fundraising with the club president. German Club donated $400 from their account to the Drason Pace Fund.

Junior Dan Maric puts the finishing touches on a float for the Homecoming Parade. Serbian Club was one of the more recently formed clubs participating in the festivities.

Student Union meets to outline the details of the Homecoming Dance. Although most students are unaware of this, Student Union puts together, organizes, and executes school functions such as dances and assemblies.

Starting with an enthusiastic "Hey everybody, it's music time", the Niles West marching band performs at the opening pep assembly of the year. Entertainment included the band, cheerleaders, and pommers.

With their Marching Band T-shirts underneath, percussion pit players perform while standing on their specialized marching shoes. The band marched a fabulous show with summer band, in-class rehearsals, weekly night practices, and often, weekend tortures.

There are many different music organizations offered at our school. One of which is the band program. William Koch heads this section of the music department which practices both during the school day and after school and weekends.

In mid-summer, the first of many practices begin. Marching Band is offered to all students who wish to participate. The band begins practice in mid-July and attends a four day band camp to prepare for upcoming competitions. The Marching Band goes to 3-5 competitions per season. They also play at some pep assemblies. The Marching Band also travels and tours throughout the year. They went to Indianapolis to attend the Bands of America Competition.

Continuing through the year, Beginning Band, Concert Band, and Symphonic Bands take over. Unlike Marching Band, these bands attend classes during the day. The Symphonic Band consists mostly of juniors and seniors. The Symphonic Band performs at the Martin Luther King Jr. Assembly, Pasta and Pops, and other events. The Concert Band, made up of freshman and sophomores also plays at certain school events. One of these events is Pasta and Pops, a night where all of the musical organizations come together and perform. Approximately 700 people attend and 400 students play. The night is filled with spaghetti slurping and musical entertainment of all kinds.

The Beginning Band focuses on style, musical interpretation, and note values. The Beginning Band is not involved in many concerts, or special events, but the members are preparing and working hard to be in Concert Band.

Jazz Band is another part of the band program. The Jazz Band consists of trumpets, saxophones, percussion, trombones, and electric guitars. They perform in assemblies and concerts, as well as various competitions. The Jazz Band is also the Pep Band, which plays at home basketball games and gives spirit to the crowd.

This musical department offers a number of musical ensembles to accommodate a variety of different talents and skill levels of the students. Through hard work and practice, the various sections of the band are able to learn about music, enjoy the satisfaction of a great performance, and meet new people.

With a mighty "Gloria", Expressions greets the auditorium crowd with a fanfare accompanied by the pianist and two established trumpet players from Symphonic Band. With barely enough room to breathe, chorus members performed ten minutes of heaven during the Holiday Assembly, ending with a magnificent combined choir piece, "Hodie".

Music has been used throughout the centuries for entertainment, history, and freedom of expression. Starting from the tender year of Choraliers, a freshman girl develops basic skills such as tone production, breathing, diction, blend, and sight-reading. A mid-year evaluation determines the placement for the following year. Students could be placed in either Choral Union, Chamber Choir, or Expressions. And that is Expressions, not Expression!

Starting the year with the song "Blessing", director Paula Bachman, made her debut at the orchestra and choral concert. Shock vibrated throughout the auditorium as each individual group showed tremendous improvement from the year before. Audience members showered Bachman and the performers with compliments that were well deserved.

It was a great disappointment when the chorus tour to San Francisco was canceled due the small number of first payments. However, the chorus was seen doing everything from singing at Lou Malnati's to participating in the National Honor Society Induction Ceremony and the Martin Luther King Jr. assembly. Also, soloists that sing the National Anthem at pep assemblies and games are members of the chorus.

With willingness to work, the four choruses gave magnificent performances while they perfect their singing abilities during class. Perhaps, they were "blessed", but that is highly debatable.

This music ensemble consists of mainly the strings. The orchestra, with its ranging variety of instruments such as the cello, violin, viola, and bass perform at many of the school's elite events. They perform at the National Honor Society Induction Ceremony as well as graduation at the end of the year. Among the three musical ensembles this school has, the orchestra is usually referred to as the group that brings a more classical side to this school.

This orchestra is divided into two main groups. The Concert Orchestra consists of mainly the freshmen and sophomores who are just starting out in a larger sized orchestra. The Symphonic Orchestra consists of the more advanced students who are more skilled and have more experience playing with an orchestra. Steve Katz directs both of these groups, and he also teaches a beginning orchestra which is offered to anyone who may not have any musical experience at all and wants to try out an instrument. If a student enjoys playing a particular instrument, then he/she can go on to play with the concert orchestra.

Everyday the orchestra rehearses to perfect their program so they can perform successfully at many of the concerts held throughout the year. Katz works very hard with his orchestra to create programs that are enjoyable to all those who listen and watch the very professional-looking musical ensemble all dressed up in black and white.

The theme for the Orchesis Dance Show was "Technicolor Dance". The idea was taken from the hit musical "Joseph and the Amazing Technicolor Dreamcoat". On the evenings of March 23-25, more than 60 members filled the stage, gracefully dancing and captivating the enthusiastic audience. Bright lights, colorful costumes, and great dancers made the performance a hit. Ranging from modern to ballet, the different styles of dances displayed great technique and graceful movements.

The modern portion of the show was made possible by special guest choreographer, Roberta Cassidy. She, along with the elected officers, worked hard to create great and entertaining performances. Under the direction of Ron Culver, Orchesis and Orchettes practiced twice a week for two hours perfecting their routines. First time member, sophomore Chrissy Maghopoy commented, "Orchesis is a great opportunity to show off your dance skills. I'll definitely be on it until I graduate."

This year's officers are president Maricris DePedro, vice president Shana Margolis, show coordinator Alisa Sajadi, secretary Lizzy Sajadi, and treasurer Lainie Manta. In addition, Orchesis decided to add another dance group in hopes of expanding the club. Orchettes, the newest addition to the school's dance group, is available for those who haven't had much background in dance. Students and other dance fans can certainly look forward to great performances from both Orchesis and Orchettes in the future.

Red Ribbon Week, the pre-prom assembly, Snowball, and D.A.R.E . . . are just the few of the many projects members of S.A.D.D. are involved in throughout the year. Students Against Drunk Driving, as it is formally known, is dedicated to the prevention of people driving under the influence of alcohol.

S.A.D.D., sponsored by security officer James O. Puff, meets every other Thursday after school. Most meetings last only fifteen to twenty minutes, so that the students who are involved in sports and other activities don't have to compromise their schedule. During the meetings, members make posters warning against the dangers of drunk driving and they discuss ways to make fellow students and the community more aware.

Members watch the S.A.D.D. story to learn about the formation of the organization, which was started by a hockey coach in Illinois following the death of two of his players due to drunk driving. The members also learn about the Contract for Life. The contract, which is read and signed by both teens and their parents, is designed to prevent driving under the influence.

Every May, S.A.D.D. organizes a special pre-prom assembly for juniors and seniors. The assembly usually features a coroner from Lake County who talks about his experience with victims of drunk driving accidents. Members of S.A.D.D. also participate in the Snowball and Drug Abuse Resistance Education (D.A.R.E.) programs at the local junior highs.

A few years ago some students started a club, and they called themselves Students Against a Vanishing Earth, better known as S.A.V.E. Their main goal is to clean up the environment. Members also pride themselves in educating others on how important it is to respect our community.

S.A.V.E. set up many programs concerning different issues such as animal rights and recycling. Just a year ago, their efforts for preserving animal rights contributed to Avon disallowing the use of animals in cosmetic tests. They work first at improving our local environment, starting with the school. Members also strive to better the environment globally. They attend youth summits with young people from around the country to share ideas and work together on improving the awareness among both students and adults.

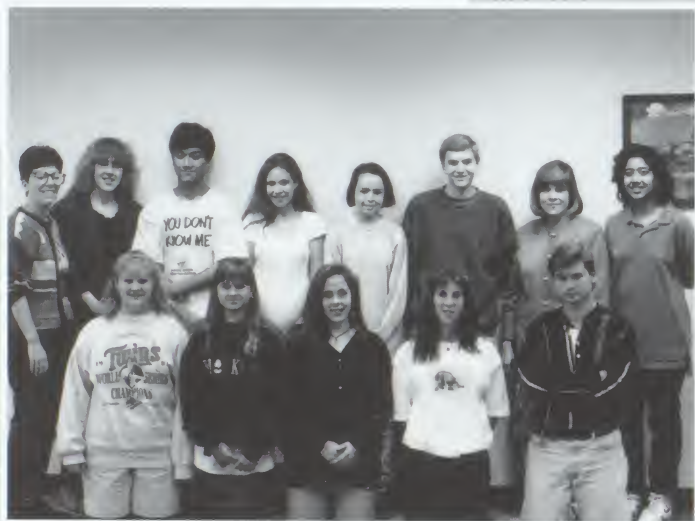

S.A.V.E. is a very productive club; they have accomplished many of their goals. Dedicated members have given their heart and soul to make sure everyone will have a better tomorrow.

One of the most important organizations in our school is the student government. The three branches meet during mods 14-16 on various days. Each branch has its own specific duties and purpose and each works to improve the quality of life for the students.

Senior Cabinet has the responsibility of planning the Homecoming parade in October, as well as graduation in May. Sponsor Lisa Dunham feels that Senior Cabinet also helps to prepare seniors for the "real world" and adulthood through community service.

Junior Cabinet is responsible for what may be the biggest dance of high school life: prom. The cabinet is responsible from everything to booking a banquet room to putting on the pre-prom fashion show. Sponsor Laurie Shapiro aids the cabinet members in their plans.

Sophomore Cabinet plans many social gatherings such as the Lip Sync, Frosh-Soph Mixer, and the Talent Show. Advisor James O. Puff along with the members of Sophomore Cabinet raise funds for next year's prom.

Freshman Cabinet has mainly one official responsibility: preparing and selling buttons for Homecoming. The Freshman Cabinet also planned the dance held after first semester finals, as well as holding a holiday lunch for the students of Molloy School. This was Sally Moore's first year as sponsor.

Student Senate, sponsored by Chris Schwarz, sends representatives to school board meetings and other administrative functions to act as a voice for student opinions on issues concerning their lives at school. Their pet cause for this past year was the controversial Walkman issue.

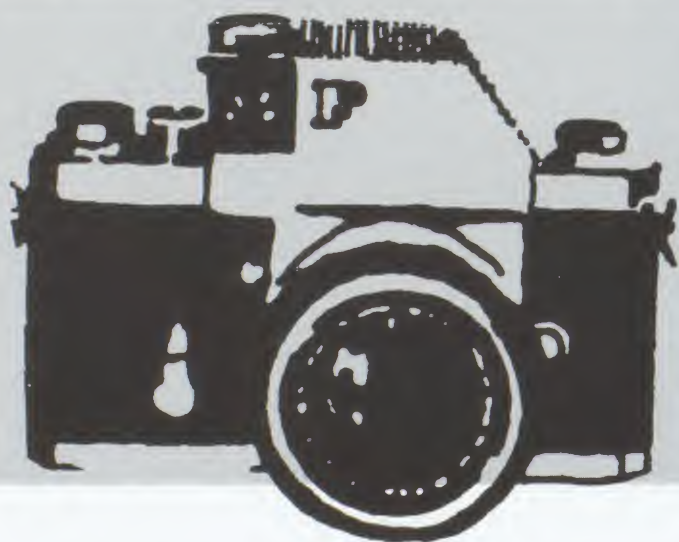

The third and final branch of Student Government is Student Union, sponsored by Joe Serpico. Student Union is responsible for planning pep rallies, the Homecoming Dance, and Turnabout. Union is also responsible for boosting school spirit.

During one of the many W.H.O. Club volunteer gatherings, junior club member Melinda Balk entertains her guest.

Visiting nursing homes, helping out at the Salvation Army, and spending time with latch-key kids; these are just some of the wonderful contributions the W.H.O. Club has to offer. The main goal of W.H.O., which stands for West Helps Others, is to lend a helping hand to those in need.

The W.H.O. club made numerous visits to nursing homes and homeless shelters. Members also visited the Salvation Army and held a party for the kids at Sojourner Truth School. They participated in a latch-key program with students from Thomas A. Edison School, spending a couple of hours with the kids after school. Latch-key kids are students who remain after school past the end of the school day because their parents work. Members of W.H.O. also went to Miami, Florida, during spring break to work with Habitat for Humanity. Habitat for Humanity helps build houses for victims of Hurricane Andrew.

With all of these contributions, West Helps Others has made a great name for itself. Members have definitely made a difference in more ways than one. Officer Theresa Allocco said, "I love this club. It helped me realize that I can make a difference, and that through service we not only bring joy to others but make ourselves happy as well."

Posing for the camera, seniors Christina Gabler and Kim Wallin smile as they relax during their lunch period. Upperclassmen usually go out for lunch, but some prefer "Cafe West".

Senior Jeremy McCormick explains an AP biology assignment to fellow seniors Sara Williams and Shana Margolis. Advanced placement classes require a lot of hard work and dedication by students.

Seniors Elias Peroulas, Vlad Khodosh, Miodrag Spasojevic, and Chirag Shah gather up to give this yearbook a picture to remember them by.

At the Homecoming Dance, senior Alex Brashear and date take center floor as they dance to a few songs before leaving. Many people enjoy the dance more than dinner and the desserts afterwards, but others only go to the dance as a formality before they leave with their dates and friends.

Senior Mark Pagnajen slaves over one the many worksheets given out by teachers. Pagnajen is an active athlete as well as an established trombone player.

Spectrum staff member Reni Kim rushes to meet a deadline by putting the finishing touches on her layouts for the sophomore class. Kim became more involved in the production of the yearbook in her second year as a staff member, and she did get a rude awakening as to how much work goes into the making of this FABULOUS book!

Junior Deborah Acker completes her layouts for the staff section. Yearbook students have the many pressures of meeting deadlines, checking spelling, and finishing their sections.

Tanveer's Acknowledgment

Dear Staff and Friends -

As of right now, I am extremely relieved that this book is completed. A lot of hard work and dedication goes into the production of a yearbook, and I am extremely thankful for everyone's help. I would like to specifically say thank you to:

My family : I want to say thank you for the love and support you have always given me. Also, thank you for all the rides to and from school and to the post office. Parveen Apa - I'm going to miss you.

Ms. Lewis : I must admit that I was pretty worried last summer at the thought of having a new advisor, but you put that fear to rest. Thank you for making my job a whole lot easier. Good luck always!

Pin : We've had quite a few battles these past few years, but there is nobody I would rather be editor-in-chief with than you. Have fun next year and don't get too stressed out.

Reni : Thanks for your help with the Senior Credits section, especially with the layouts.

Hena : Thanks for the rides after school. You've been a great bud these past few years. Good luck in the future. Oh, and it's been great sharing the Spectrum office with West Word (Ha, Ha).

Everybody who gave me quotes and let me take pictures of them : Thank you so much. But, I am sorry for always pestering you guys with a camera or paper and pen.

Returning Staff : Good luck and have fun next year.

Freshman Jovan Vojcic smiles as he rechecks the student names for spelling errors. Spectrum is a class offered at the end of the day during mods. 26-28.

Sophomores Joel Manansala and Maria Trograncic look at a new computer program, trying to figure it out. Manansala and Trograncic were the sports editors for this year's yearbook.

A photographer sneaks up on yearbook advisor Michele Lewis as she calls attendance. Lewis tried very hard to prevent this picture from being printed, but the Spectrum editors were relentless.

Lounging on the couch, juniors Nicole Bandur and Mike Schmidt laugh about a couple of pictures that were sent in for the yearbook. This infamous couch was a savior to most of the staff members after a long night of trying to meet a deadline.

Pin's Acknowledgment

Dear Niles West,

As I sit here typing away, I realize how pathetic my life really is. Monday through Friday are, of course, the ever-interesting school days. Friday night, I stay after school with other Spectrum members, sometimes till 9PM, to finish a few pages for the upcoming deadline. As if my weekdays were not bad enough, I had to wake up at 5AM in the morning for a greasy day at McDonald's on Saturday. Sometimes, when I am lucky, I will not have to work on Sunday; but instead of spending the day doing anything else, I work on yearbook.

There are, surprisingly, advantages to my endless circle of torture. For one, I see very little of my family. YES! Of course, the one thought that keeps me going in life is that you will be reading this book. That was a joke by the way. Really, I hope you have enjoyed the 1994-1995 Spectrum. I became co-editor-in-chief with very little experience and knowledge. Since this is the editor's acknowledgement, I would like to thank some people from the bottom of my heart.....

Mrs. Lewis: Do not forget summer camp, Peter and Peter, Friday night pizzas, and of course the phrase, "Yes, I'm married."

Tanveer: Stay sweet and loving. And do not worry, you will do fine in college. I should know first-hand.

Reni, Heidi, and Kelly: Duct tape, mushroom or green pepper pizzas. "How do you spell...?"

Nicole: Even though you did not exactly help me on yearbook, you have helped me through other so-called "life experiences". Thank you.

Dolores and Jay: I hope you got enough sleep after helping me color. No, I am not paying you.

Everyone else: I love ya all.
